

Vodka made from 12,000 year old icebergs – nature's purest water!

12,000 years ago, the Earth's snow was truly Pure, Immaculate, Untouched and Pristine. In the Canadian Arctic, this snow froze and compacted into enormous glacial walls...shielded and protected for thousands of years, avoiding all impurities from the outside world. Today, thousands of years later, these icebergs are being carefully harvested as pure as when they were created. The icebergs are then blended with triple distilled, rich Ontario sweet corn, to produce ICEBERG Vodka. A distinct drinking pleasure, 12,000 years pure.

Our master distillers and blenders use strict diligence and the utmost care to produce our premium quality Vodka. But it is Nature alone that makes ICEBERG pure premium! We are proud to present ICEBERG Vodka. Enjoy it straight up, right out of the freezer, in your favorite mixed drink, or as the purest, driest ICEBERG Martini you've ever tasted.

ICEBERG Vodka, Rated #1

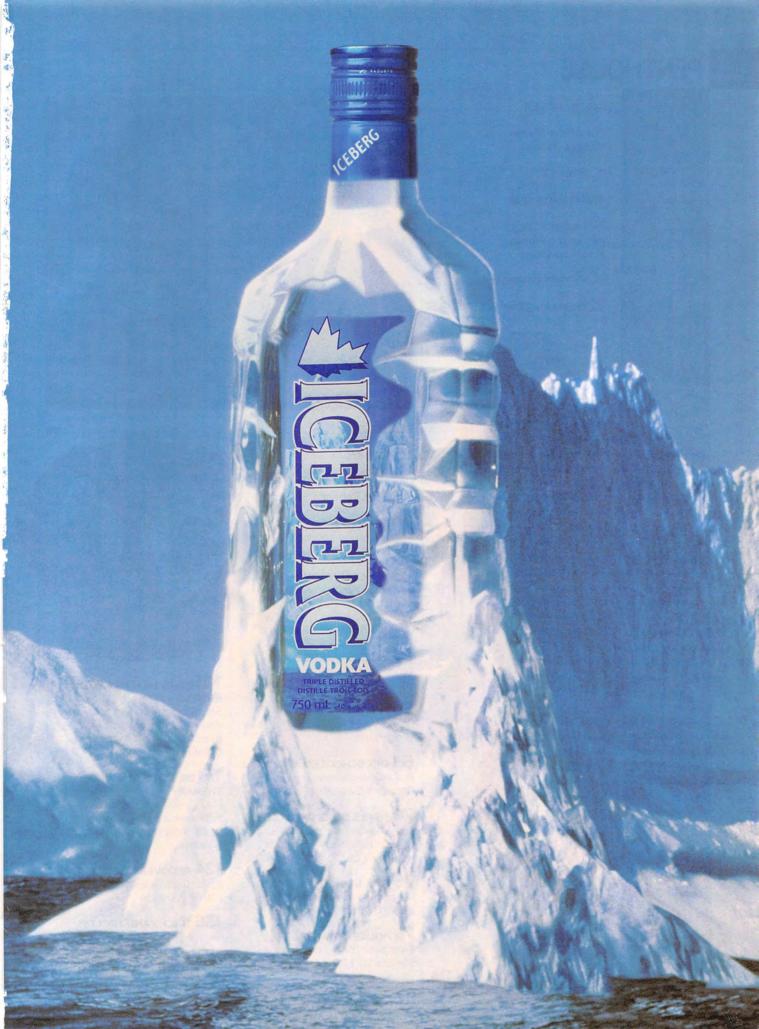

The NY Chapter of Tasters Guild Int'l ranked ICEBERG Vodka #1 in a blind tasting of international super-premium vodkas. ICEBERG Vodka was also awarded the Gold Medal and a Best Buy designation at the World Spirits Championships held in Chicago.

Our NFL preview gives important dates, play-off predictions, and the best picks for fantasy football. Hopefully, you'll win every football pool out there.

ALL'S WELLS David Wells doesn't date pop stars or take steroids. No wonder we like him. Dave Hollander caught up with the man who embodies old-school baseball, and found out why he's washed his hands of Yankees fans and what performanceenhancing drug he prefers. (Hint: It's carbonated.) And check out Hollander's new book. 52 Weeks, from The Lyons Press-it hits shelves in November and features interviews with famous sports figures.

LATHER, RINSE, REPEAT If you've been spending extra quality time with yourself in the bathroom lately-grooming, that isdon't miss "Groom at the Top." Alyson Zamkoff seeks out the best products for staying clean, smelling fresh, and looking good, so you'll get all the attention you deserve.

THE FRAT PACK As a college freshman. Aaron Karo sent an email about beer to his buddies. They forwarded it to their friends, who forwarded it to their friends, and by graduation, Karo's deep thoughts on handovers, sex, and bathroom etiquette were being sent out to 11,000 subscribers. Now you can share in those deep thoughts in Karo's Penthouse column, "Recovering Frat Boy."

ENTREPRENEUR GONE WILD

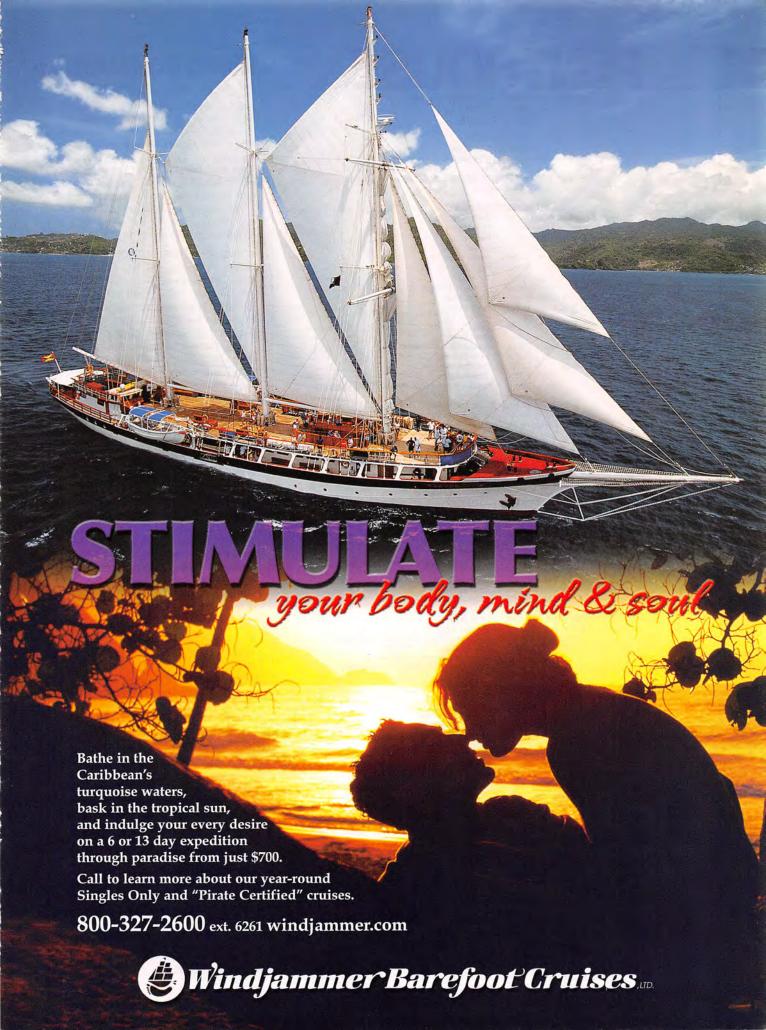

Joe Francis's entire career falls under the heading of "Why didn't we think of that first?" As the creator of Girls Gone Wild, he's created a multimillion-dollar franchise out of one simple truth: Men love boobs. In his interview with Chauncé Hayden, Francis discusses how one man can be so lucky as to earn enough money to buy two private jets and a compound in Mexicojust by convincing hot women to flash him.

MISCHIEF NIGHT We like Halloween parties. We like free candy. But we really like seeing girls dressed as kittens, cops, and nurses. And we're bringing the real spirit of Halloween to you with our roundup of the sexiest costumes from lingerie company Coquette. Flip through and see what role you want your girl to play.

KISS AND TELL

Dorothy Stein-better known as Dr. Dot-gets paid to give A-list celebrities the rubdown. (And we thought our job was fun.) Now the babe who's seen countless rock stars butt-naked tells Chauncé Hayden all her secrets. "I'd never say anything bad," the masseuse said after her Penthouse shoot (where, by the way, she fell off a bed and tore ligaments in her knee). "It's not a kiss-and-tell." Yeah, right. Find out who acted like a jackass, who tried to get a happy ending, and who packs some of the biggest pistols on the road.

HAPPY ANNIVERSARY! Since October is our anniversary issue, we wanted to give you something special to remind you of the great times we've shared. After lots of thought, we finally found the perfect present-hot, naked women, and lots of 'em. As soon as we saw these stunning girls, we knew they were just what you wanted. Enjoy!O+ pa

NIGHTTIME MANEUVERS I was tired of being stuck at home while my husband was away on business, so when a coworker invited me to a party, I had my parents take the kids, and off I went.

I was at the party for about an hour when a sexy fatigueclad Latino walked in. All the to cool off. I made a quick stop into the bathroom and splashed cold water on my face and neck. When I opened the door, Carlos was standing on the other side, his gorgeous eyes fixed on mine. He silently backed me into the bathroom and closed the door. I began to

"I've waited months for this." Carlos said as he lowered himself between my legs. He eagerly buried his face and tongue into my quivering love nest.

"Oh, my God," I gasped as he devoured my pussy in a way that my husband never did. Within minutes I exploded, and still he wouldn't let up. I had never had a guy go down on me for that long and with so much enthusiasm. I thanked my lucky stars as Carlos brought me to more orgasms than I could count.

He collapsed on top of me, pushed his fat cock

"Carlos tore off my clothes and threw me onto the bed. As I watched him undress, I realized I had never been this wet before."

women were curious about this hottie. His name was Carlos and he was 23, single, and a sergeant in the Army.

It was easy to see what Carlos wanted. I'd be looking to get laid too if I'd been away for 15 months. The guy certainly deserved to have some fun. I told myself that if I were single and ten years younger, I'd give him whatever he wanted.

Carlos moved across the room, introducing himself to every girl in sight. When he approached me, even the sight of my wedding band didn't put him off.

Throughout the evening, Carlos kept returning to me and staring at me hungrily. I was both flattered and turned on by his interest. Just looking into those chocolate-brown eyes made me sweat.

I think it's all right for a married woman to look at a good-looking man. But the thoughts racing through my mind—I'm certain they were all wrong!

I decided it was best to leave the party before I acted on those dirty thoughts, but first I needed melt as he pressed his lips to mine. He reached beneath my skirt to finger my now-wet snatch. He stroked my hot mound as we continued to kiss passionately. The pleasure his hand stirred was almost unbearable.

Carlos kneeled in front of me, hiked up my skirt, and yanked down my panties in one swift move. He licked the moisture from my slit and his tongue massaged my clit. I couldn't believe I was allowing him unlimited access to my body-and it felt good. I lifted his face from my pussy, thinking how lucky I was. Carlos gave me a wide smile and told me I was the most beautiful girl at the party. Needless to say, this smooth talker was about to get whatever his heart desired.

Carlos followed me back to my place. Once inside, I led him straight to my bedroom. He tore off my clothes and threw me onto the bed. As I watched him undress, I realized I had never been this wet before. I saw his eight-inch ramrod standing ready for action and licked my lips in anticipation.

deep inside my throbbing pussy, and fucked me for all he was worth. His hard-driving rod made me scream with joy each time it plunged into me. With my arms and legs wrapped tight around his toned body, Carlos fucked me through two more mind-blowing orgasms.

When it was time for Carlos to get his, I pleaded, "Come inside me! I want your hot come to fill me up!" I held Carlos in place as he let out his final thrusts. He moaned and his load filled my pussy.

We fucked through the night and into the next day before he had to leave. It was the best sex of my life, and I doubt I'll ever experience anything that delicious again. He told me he's a Penthouse fan, so I hope he gets to read this. I know he'll love it as much as I loved having him.—P.N., Florida

Dwight Noise

Don't take Rainn Wilson too seriously. While his deadpan delivery of politically incorrect comments is what makes his power-hungry character Dwight Schrute so hilarious on NBC's The Office, it makes for awkward moments in casual conversation with a gullible writer. "They keep attacking him and it's terrible," he says in a concerned voice, in regards to his 11-month-old son and the two pit bulls he has at home. "I don't know what we're going to do, but they keep trying to bite his face off." Pause. Then he laughs.

The 39-year-old Seattle native has been successfully building a career as "that creepy guy" on shows like Six Feet Under and flicks like House of 1,000 Corpses. But is Wilson sinister in real life? Perhaps we should have waited until the end of the interview to call child services.

How do you compare with Dwight?

I'm a pretty normal, reasonable guy. I have a very active inner Dwight. Someone once described him as a fascist nerd. and that sums him up perfectly. He's very into hierarchies, control, and is an absolute dorkprobably playing Diablo II on his computer until three in the morning. I'm not really like him, but I do come from generations of annoying middle managers. My dad managed a sewer-construction business.

Ever work for him?

I avoided the sewers. I dug a few

"You want creepy? You want off-thewall, alienated, or disturbed? Call Rainn Wilson. I'm the goto guy."

ditches and I was terrible at it. so they never wanted to hire me.

Would that qualify as the worst job you ever had?

No, that was when I delivered marine supplies. I used to drive around anchors, propellers, and boat paint all over Seattle in this giant 25-foot truck. It was awful. I kept running into telephone poles. But I've had a lot of jobs. I worked in a dinner theater, answered phones at an advertising company, was an office manager at the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, bussed tables, picked raspberries ...

Raspberries?

Oh yeah! I worked there from when I was 13 to 17. They pay you by how much you pick, so they escape the minimum-wage laws. I figured it out once. I was paid $2 an hour.

When you weren't picking berries, did you dream of becoming an actor?

Yeah. I never told anybody, but I always knew.

Why keep it a secret?

Well, they were beating me up enough for just being a regular nerd. So if I'd said, "I want to be an actor," I probably would have gotten torn apart limb by limb. I was a total dork. At one point in my sophomore year, I was on the chess team, the Model United Nations, the marching band, and the computer club.

That's impressive. Usually you hear celebrities like Jennifer Garner say, "I was in the marching band. I was such a nerd in high school."

Yeah, they always say that, but I never buy it. I don't know about her inner nerd, but I've got the looks to back it up.

But look at you now! Where do you see yourself in the future?

I'd like to be with Angelina Jolie ... but I think I'll actually be playing weirdos and freaks. You want creepy? You want off-the-wall, alienated, or disturbed? Call Rainn Wilson. I'm the go-to guy.

DVDs

Do Look Back

One of the most acclaimed directors offers up his look at the voice of a generation with the Dylan bio No Direction Home: Bob Dylan ($30). Martin Scorsese began with full access to the Dylan archives and ended up securing the legend's cooperation. The two-part film, which covers 1961–66, features extensive, previously unreleased footage from concerts, recording sessions, outtakes, and interviews, plus Dylan speaking at length about that fertile period.

That's Gonna Leave a Mark

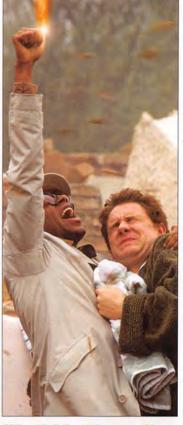

Chris Farley and David Spade hit their buddy-movie high note with the road-trip flick Tommy Boy, which has the added bonus of a drippingwet, bikini-clad Bo Derek, not to mention pretty boy Rob Lowe getting his ass kicked all over the place. Of course, Farley and their wheels take a beating as well. The Holy Schnike Edition ($20) includes deleted scenes, a commentary track by director Peter Segal, and four featurettes (Behind the Laughter, Stories From the Side of the Road, Just the Two of Us, and Growing Up Farley).

We're on the move, whether it's Greenwich Village in the sixties, a road trip in the Midwest, or a farcical romp around the galaxy.

"Pull My Finger"

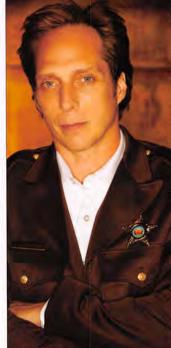

Stop the world, it's time to get off. This year's adaptation of The Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy ($30), the best-selling scifi comedy classic from British author Douglas Adams, arrives on DVD with deleted scenes-and fake deleted scenes-a making-of featurette, two commen tary tracks (sadly, no Mos Def), a sing-along, and an additional guidebook entry. It's also available on Universal Media Disc ($30) for the PSP, which includes the making-of doc and both sets of deleted scenes.

HOT NEW SHOWS TO TIVO

Prison Break

When we first saw Michael Scofield (Wentworth Miller), we immediately thought. What a dumbass! After collecting $500,000 during a bank robbery, he insists on getting more cash ... from a vault that can only be opened by a manager who is out to lunch. We realize he isn't such a chump when he starts his five-year stint at Fox River State Penitentiary. See, Michael's brother Lincoln (Dominic Purcell) is locked up there too, awaiting execution for the murder of the vice president's brother. Since Lincoln insists he's innocent, Michael gets himself thrown in the clink to help his bro escape. How? In the biggest coincidence of all time, Michael was the engineer who built the joint. His knowledge of the prison's ins and outs will have them free in no time. It will do nothing, however, about the sodomy.

Invasion

After leaving us hanging with Lost (Will Jack ever tap that hot chick's ass? Why is the fat guy still ginormous?), the folks at ABC are trying to pull us into another "What the fuck is going on here?" show. This time the shit hits the fan in a tiny Everglades town after a hurricane gives the locals a thrashing. Turns out a little girl claims she saw strange lights moving toward the water during the storm, which makes her pops (Eddie Cibrian) wonder if there are extraterrestrials in their midst. It doesn't help that his ex-wife is found naked and facedown in a pond with no idea how she got there. As the sheriff (the brilliant William Fichtner) prepares to quarantine the entire area for "safety reasons," we can't help but wonder about his ulterior (alien?) motives. The guy is just that creepy!

Our intrepid reporter watched more TV pilots for the upcoming season than vou can imagine, just so you wouldn't have to. We recommend these hot new dramas and sitcom slam dunks.

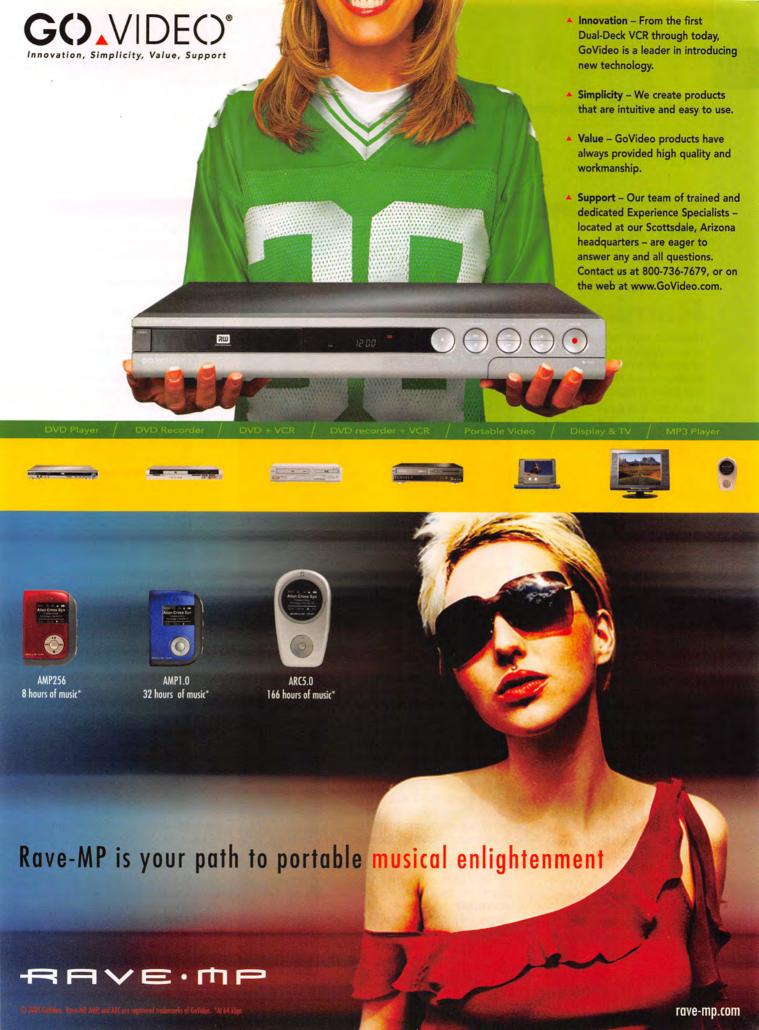

My Name Is Earl

While watching Jason Lee rant as the voice of reason in Chasing Amy, sprout devil horns in Dogma, and play a cocky rock star in Almost Famous, we've all thought, He'd be a cool guy to grab a beer with. Now we can see just how down-to-earth Lee can be as Earl-a skanky, cigarette-smoking, beer-guzzling, good-for-nothin' redneck who ekes out a living as a petty thief. When he wins 100 grand in the lottery, only to be hit by a car moments later, with the winning ticket swept away in the exhaust-filled wind, Earl concludes the hit-and-run was payback for all the bad things he's done. We don't know if he'll succeed in changing his luck by setting right 259 past acts, but we can't wait to watch him try.

Everybody Hates Chris

Our initial reaction to the idea of a family comedy from Chris Rock was. The dude's lost it, sold out, gone soft. Toning his act down for the Oscars was one thing. but a sitcom? Our bad: We ended up laughing our asses off! Granted, celebs from Paris Hilton's MILF to Tommy Lee are shilling their life story. But Rock, narrating his experiences as a 13year-old (played by Tyler Williams), shills it right. Sure, there are the standard sitcom elements: His ten-vear-old brother is already a ladies' man, his bratty lil' sis is always trying to get Chris into trouble, and the folks fight over who pays the bills. But imagine all that with Rock's smartass narrative over it. Crack-alackin' indeed.

The Bands You'll Worship Tomorrow

INTERVIEW

Q&A: Twiggy

Nine Inch Nails' newest quitarist. who now goes by his birth name of Jeordie White, reveals his real feelings about Marilyn Manson and Brian Wilson.

How's the NIN tour?

Mentally it's one of the healthiest tours I've been on. Trent [Reznor] is sober now, and being around him makes me healthier. I still drink, but it's made me take everything down a notch. Being on tour and doing drugs and other debauchery is fun and exciting at first, but then it becomes pathetic and stupid. I'm no angel, believe me. I still like to have fun.

Were you bummed you didn't play the MTV Movie Awards?

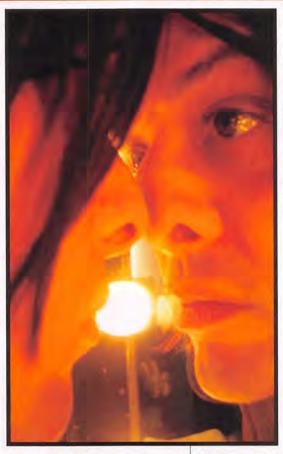

I'm glad we didn't. I hate those things, whether it's MTV, the American Music Awards, or the Grammys. Anytime you play on TV, I think you look totally stupid. The sound sucks, the lighting is shitty, someone fucks up ... it was a blessing in disguise.

Why did you join the band?

Trent and I created a lot of great things in the past. Joining Nine Inch Nails was like shutting the door on the past and moving on, because Trent had a lot to do with the success of Marilyn Manson to begin with. He had signed us and produced our breakthrough album.

Weren't you also lighting off fireworks inside his house some vears back?

My brother and I were lighting them off indoors on July 4 at Trent's place. We were throwing bottle rockets at each other and my little brother picked one up, got scared, and threw it. It landed right in the box of fireworks and proceeded to explode. It was pretty impressive, actually.

Does moving from band to band allow you to experiment more?

Yeah. With Marilyn Manson, it was a lifestyle and a giant art project. For ten years, it was literally living in the fucking yellow submarine, except it was more like a misery machine. I don't regret anything-it was some of the best times in my life. We were out of our minds and that showed in the music. Towards the end, it was kind of crippling to me because you have that whole security blanket of, "I'm in a band. I'm not a loser."

And now?

Within six months of leaving Manson, I had gotten the A Perfect Circle job and was auditioning for Metallica. I was writing lyrics and words and music.

"Marilyn Manson a lifestyle and a giant art project. except it was more like a misery machine." The songs are going to be released eventually, but at the time I thought they were too confessional.

Would you still want to be in Metallica?

I think it would be really cool because when I was a kid, Metallica was my favorite band. Going up there and being able to play "Master of Puppets" and look over and see James Hetfield was really cool. Am I glad I didn't get that job? Yeah. The money would be good and I like their music, but that would have been the end. It would have been, "I'm in Metallica now, that's it."

Do you go by Twiggy or Jeordie? Jeordie. I thought it would be inappropriate to use [Twiggy] unless it's for my own project [like Goon Moon] or Marilyn Manson. When I was using Twiggy all the time, I felt like I was totally a different person, but I think that's only because I've grown up and gotten myself out of a situation.

Your Goon Moon project is ...

After I split from Marilyn Manson. I flocked to Chris Goss to figure out what I wanted to do. We built this big catalog of music and put out stuff we didn't think would be ever released. A lot of it was us in a room playing and the recorder happened to be on. We wanted to put out something that was the extreme of ridiculousness, to disappoint people or offend them. Instead of coming out with single-oriented songs that had verses and choruses, we wanted to put out something that would turn heads a little bit. On the last song, we're trying to get the vocal sound of old Beach Boys' records that sound really scary to me. Some of that Brian Wilson stuff freaks me out a little.

What's next?

Producing is the next step. I want to put 100 percent into it because I'll get to stay home and have a normal life.

RETRO!

Prince is the best of all time! What? Spoon front man and 1999 lover Britt Daniel explains.

Why 1999?

It's a really experimental record. It goes a lot of places. It's just amazing how [Prince] made it. He did a song a day, then he would go back and work on it.

When did you first hear it?

Probably 1982, when it came out. I was in middle school. I remember a friend had it on cassette, and we'd listen to "Let's Pretend We're Married" a lot because it had the dirty words on it. At that point I was just listening to the singles. I'd get to the fifth song, then rewind it and start back over again.

I've heard Prince before Spoon shows. Is that intentional?

We're very particular about the music that's on the PA before and after we play. One of the choices is 1999: The New Master. It's basically 1999 without the singles—the hard-core dance stuff. It always puts me in a good mood.

Tell me a Prince story.

I think Prince is the greatest of all time. I said that to my band once and they were like, "Wait a second. Prince is the greatest of all time? Prince vs. the Beatles?" I thought my head was going to explode.

All right then ... Prince or the Beatles? If I had to pick one person, I would pick Prince.

Prince or John Lennon?

Prince. Lennon is greater for some things, like his voice and the personal aspect of his music. Prince has a great voice, but it doesn't top Lennon's. He doesn't write songs that are that overtly personal or baring. You have to look at the whole package. The guy can dance. The guy puts on an amazing show. The guy plays all the instruments. He's the greatest of all time ... what can I say?

Have you seen him live?
I've seen him three ve seen him three times. Twice last summer, and both of those [concerts] were just amazing. I was in the audience. I wish I was backstage. It was like watching God's love onstage.

Howl (RCA) ****

Since this album is a pastiche of Americana, folding country into blues and gospel, it's odd that BRMC decided it should reach the United States two months after Howl was released in the U.K. Perhaps these Anglophiles had to prove they have more going for them than a talent to create spacey British-inspired rock. And while Howl (their third record) may not have much in common with 2003's protestfueled Take Them On, On Your Own, it does put this San Francisco band one step farther from a Jesus and Mary Chain comparison.

Kickoff Cocktails

What makes an ideal tailgate cocktail? I have one ironclad, irrefutable, all-encompassing guideline: It should be easy to make. It should be a beverage that a guy can whip together in the flatbed of his truck before the game, one that requires more than a bottle opener and less than a blender. In other words, no strawberries, no umbrellas, and nothing that rhymes with, resembles, or is, in fact, spritzer. Beyond that, most anything's fair game. An impressive-sounding name helps too. Like Dick Butkus or the Fridge.

THE KICKED

You might also call this the Kickoff because it's a twist on the traditional Bloody Mary. This eye-opener is a great way to start those early-morning tailgates.

1 oz. Smirnoff Citrus Twist, 3 oz. Bloody Mary mix
Mix with salt and pepper, and garnish with a celery stick. Stir occasionally with a crisp piece of bacon or a French toast stick.

SNOWSHOP

Chris Lutes, owner of the Middlesex Lounge in Cambridge, Massachusetts, has created the perfect pregame mixer for the late-season play-off run. "A little goes a long way," says Lutes.

1 liter of bourbon, 1 liter of peppermint schnapps

Freeze the bourbon and schnapps overnight. Mix them together in a large bowl and funnel the booze back into their bottles. Freeze until ready to use.

THE BUITZ

Named after that play where a bunch of linebackers knock you on your ass. You'll be taking a zigzag route after three or four of these.

2 oz. Booker's bourbon, splash of vermouth Pour over rocks and add vermouth.

FIRST AND GOLD

This straight-up margarita with a twist will have you sidelined. With lemon-lime soda and a lime wedge, it's like Gatorade, but less performance-enhancing.

1 oz. Jose Cuervo Especial tequila, 1 oz. triple sec, 2 oz. freshsqueezed lime juice or sweet-and-sour mix, splash of lemonlime soda, lime wedge

Rub the rim of a margarita glass with lime and dip it in salt. In a cocktail shaker, combine the tequila, triple sec, and lime juice. Pour over ice. Top off with lemon-lime soda and garnish with the lime wedge.

BLOODY HAIL MARY

After this spicy Mary, you'll pray for victory, your liver, and possibly your soul.

1 oz. Absolut Peppar vodka, 3 oz. Bloody Mary mix, one splash of Sauza tequila Salt the rim of glass. Stir in vodka and Bloody Mary mix. Add tequila. Garnish with blue cheese-stuffed olives.

THE LIMEBACKER

Not only a clever pun, but also a great warm-weather cocktail for fans living south of the Mason-Dixon.

1 oz. Smirnoff Citrus Twist, 3 oz. lemon-lime soda, lime wheel Mix and garnish with a lime wheel.

PENTHOUSE TOP 5 MLB PENNANT RACES

The baseball season sails into the homestretch this month, bringing with it the annual prospect of a rip-roaring pennant race, one of the most exciting spectacles in sports. Here's a look at the five greatest races for an MLB flag.

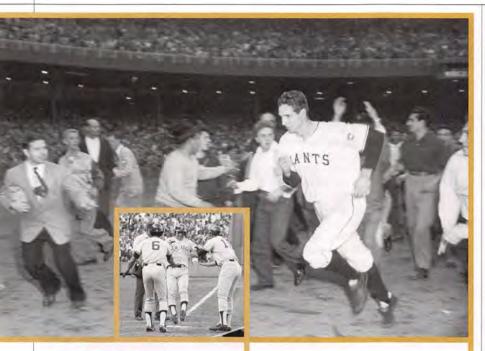

1967 AL-It wasn't all futility for the Red Sox before their epochal 2004 World Series victory. There were a lot of memorable "almosts" for the club, including their dramatic 1967 pennant push. Boston survived a four-team scramble through September to win the American League flag at the wire. With 26 games to play, the Red Sox, Twins, Tigers, and White Sox were clustered within 21/2 games of one another at the top of the AL. With three games left (five for the White Sox), that margin had shrunk to 1/2. Boston's Carl Yastrzemski (above, inset), who won the Triple Crown that season (Yaz was the last player to do so), went ten for 13 in the final two games of the year as the Red Sox beat the Twins twice and won the AL pennant. Of course, they then suffered a crushing, seven-game defeat to St. Louis in the World Series as Cardinals ace Bob Gibson won three games.

1993 NL West—This fight to the finish between the San Francisco Giants and the Atlanta Braves (above) was the last great pennant race. On August 15, the Giants had the best record in baseball and led the Braves by 7½ games. Two weeks later, the Braves had cut the lead to 41/2: a week after that, it was down to two. Then the Giants lost three in a row at home, and on September 15, after leading the NL West for 123 days, they trailed the Braves by 31/2. San Francisco bounced back, though, winning 14 of 16 games to reach the last day of the season with a 103-58 record, same as the Braves. After all that, the deciding day was somewhat anticlimactic as Atlanta beat Colorado 5-1 and the Giants were routed 12-1 by the Dodgers. But Atlanta fans didn't mind: That NL West flag was the third of what would be a record 13 consecutive division titles for the Braves.

1908 NL—Merkle's Boner: It's not a selection from our adult catalog, but a careless play by the New York Giants' 19-year-old rookie Fred Merkle (above) on September 23, 1908, when the Cubs, Giants, and Pirates were vving for the NL crown. With runners on first and third, and the Giants and Cubs tied 1-1 in the bottom of the ninth, New York's Al Bridwell smacked a single, scoring the runner from third. As fans raced onto the field in celebration of what they thought was the winning run, Merkle stopped in the middle of the base path and sprinted to the dugout—without touching second base. The Cubs retrieved the ball and touched second, putting Merkle out and nullifying the run. With fans swarming the field, the game could not be resumed and was declared a tie. The result came back into play with three games left in the season, when the Giants trailed Chicago by 11/2 games. They took three straight from the Braves to tie the idle Cubs and force a replay of the September 23 game. It was Mordecai "Three Finger" Brown against Christy Mathewson in the decider, and Brown's Cubs won 4-2. They went on to win the World Series.

1978 AL East—His name has been turned into a dirty word from Providence, Rhode Island, to Portland, Maine: Bucky Fucking Dent (above, inset), He's the stubby shortstop who plunged a dagger into the hearts of Red Sox fans with a three-run homer to win the onegame play-off for the 1978 AL East pennant. The loss was the final downturn in Boston's roller-coaster ride of a season. At the All-Star break, the Sox had led the second-place Brewers by ten games, and the third-place Yankees by 141/2. But New York came storming back, taking a four-game set at Fenway in early September (forever known as the "Boston Massacre") and opening up a 31/2-game lead. The Sox won their final eight games to close the gap and finish the regular season in a tie for first. That set up a one-game play-off at Fenway. Enter Mr. Fucking Dent in the seventh inning with the Yanks down 2-0, Mike Torrez pitching. Dent's harmless-looking fly ball on a 1-1 pitch carried over the Green Monster in left to give New York a 3-2 lead. The Yanks increased their lead to 5-2, and reliever Goose Gossage held on in a tense ninth inning for a 5-4 win.

1951 NL—Announcer Russ Hodges's immortal call, "The Giants win the pennant! The Giants win the pennant!" echoes through the game's history (you can listen to a tape of it at the Hall of Fame). Indeed, the play that provoked Hodges's outburst-Bobby Thomson's three-run, pennant-winning homer off the Dodgers' Ralph Branca—was chosen as baseball's greatest moment by The Sporting News. And rightfully so: The Giants trailed their fierce rivals, Brooklyn, by 13½ games in August 1951. Then New York went on a late-season tear, winning 37 of 44 games to finish tied with the Dodgers atop the NL. After the teams split the first two games of a three-game play-off, the season came down to one game at the Polo Grounds. The Dodgers took a 4-1 lead into the bottom of the ninth. But the Giants stayed alive with a pair of singles and a double, cutting the lead to 4-2 and prompting a pitching change. In came Branca (No. 13, incidentally) to face Thomson (above), who sent the reliever's second pitch into the left-field stands to give the Giants a 5-4 victory, and—as Hodges repeated so memorably—the NL pennant.

Mister Roger's Neighborhood

Russia's Marat Safin won the Australian Open back in January, and Spain's 19year-old, capri pants-wearing Rafael Nadal won the French in June. But make no mistake about it: Roger Federer of Switzerland is still the top dog in men's tennis. He thoroughly dominated the 2004 season, winning every Grand Slam event but the French Open, and this year, he's greedily clutched the top spot in the world rankings, winning fistfuls of tournaments, including a third straight Wimbledon title. Federer will defend his U.S. Open title this month, traveling to Arthur Ashe Stadium in Flushing. Queens, along with 2003 Open champ Andy Roddick, last year's finalist Lleyton Hewitt, Safin, and up-and-comer Nadal, among others.

This will be the 125th U.S. Open, a tournament that started in Newport, Rhode Island, in 1881. From those blue-blood beginnings, tennis has become a somewhat more democratic sport. Yet, ironically, the men's game has ended up less interesting and less colorful than it was just two decades ago. The women's game has its share of flair in the likes of Maria Sharapova (right), Serena and Venus Williams, and Anastasia Myskina, but the men's game craves personality. It doesn't have to come dressed in capri pants, but a little flavor would be nice. Andre Agassi, perhaps the strongest personality in the men's game, is in the twilight of his career. Federer is a truly brilliant player, but he's not the most exciting guy in the world. Andy Roddick has star quality, but he's a little generic, a little too polished. Lleyton Hewitt is as passionate as they come, and he can be grumpy enough to bring back memories of Ilie Nastase, but he's been relatively quiet since winning the U.S. Open in 2001 and Wimbledon in 2002.

Where are the John McEnroes, Jimmy Connorses, Biorn Borgs, and, especially, Nastases of today? Maybe this Nadal kid will bring some sparkle, but early accounts suggest he's too humble. Asked about his chances at Wimbledon, Nadal said. "On clay I can win a lot of matches if I play my best tennis. But it is different on grass. I have to improve, and at the moment I do not have the preparation to go far in a grass-court tournament." Sure enough. Nadal was bounced out of Wimbledon in the second round by 89thranked Gilles Muller of Luxembourg.

Why do baseball managers wear uniforms?

In the early days of A. the game, most teams employed a "captain," who was essentially a player/manager. Since he was just as likely to be playing in the game as coaching it, he needed to wear a uniform. The legendary Philadelphia Athletics manager Connie Mack (left) bucked the trend, preferring to wear suits in the dugout while coaching. He was encouraged to stay in the dugout, too, as baseball officials eventually made a rule requiring everyone on the field to be in uniform.

Open Ice

Shortly before the settlement of the lockout that scrapped the 2004–05 NHL season, the league test-drove a set of rule changes, hoping to incorporate some of them into the 2005–06 season, which opens next month.

Facing an uphill battle to win back the fans they iilted-not to mention a general sports public that was lukewarm on the NHL to begin withleague honchos want to open up the game, increase scoring opportunities, and create a more entertaining product. In a test scrimmage between free agents and college players, the league removed the blue lines and the center red line, replacing them with two thin lines a few feet above the face-off circles at each end of the rink. Plavers could pass the puck anywhere on the ice once they'd crossed the thin line in their zone, whereas under the standard NHL rules, they are penalized for any pass that crosses two lines.

The change, suggested by Boston Bruins president Harry Sinden, resulted in a wide-open game that pleased at least one observer. "Could you imagine Wayne [Gretzky] and Mario [Lemieux] (above) playing that kind of game?" New York Rangers president and GM Glen Sather asked the Canadian Press. "I don't know if I'd want to rush into it, but I sure like the idea."

Other possible rule changes include increasing the size of the goal, streamlining goalie equipment, and adding a shoot-out to break ties. Unless the execs reverse field, you will most likely see the latter two in NHL games this season, while Sinden's high-flying game may have to wait a while.

Keeping Up With the Jones

For a full take on the 2005-06 NFL season, which kicks off this month, check out our in-depth preview, beginning on page 28: We handicap all eight divisions, make predictions for the conference championship games and the Super Bowl, and tell you which dates to mark on your NFL calendar. There's also a fantasy-football guide. To whet your appetite, here's a look at a few of the league's most intriguing rookies, listed by name, position, team, and draft position:

Matt Jones, ?, Jacksonville, No. 21—We're not sure the NFL has ever had a player like Jones (below), who is 6' 6", 242 pounds, and runs the 40-yard dash in 4.4 seconds. He played quarterback at Arkansas, but is projected as a wideout, tight end, or the hybrid H-back position in the NFL. Before drafting him, Jacksonville worked Jones out as a punt returner. No one is quite sure how, or where, to get the most out of a guy that big and that fast. But it'll be fun watching the Jaguars try.

Ronnie Brown, RB, Miami, No. 2—The return of Ricky Williams, if it happens, actually makes Brown more interesting. He's a better blocker and receiver than Williams, and he's used to sharing the ball in the backfield, as he did at Auburn with fellow Top 5 draft pick Carnell "Cadillac" Williams. In any event, the 233-pound speedster is bound to make an impact in Miami.

Alex D. Smith, QB, San Francisco, No. 1—The woeful Niners staked the future of their franchise on this junior out of Utah. Can he make the leap from the Mountain West Conference to the NFL in one season? Most scouts say yes, and they point to Smith's size (6' 4", 212 pounds), athleticism (he rushed for 631 yards at Utah in 2004), and accurate arm (67.5 completion percentage) to back up their claim. Smith is also intelligent, and he's a proven winner, having led the Utes to a 12-0 record in his last season of college ball.

Derrick O. Johnson, LB, Kansas City, No. 15—The Chiefs have had an Achilles' heel defense the past few seasons, and they were determined to solve the problem. When they found Johnson, the best linebacker in the draft, still available that late in the first round, they pounced. He'll be a key component of a revamped unit that K.C. hopes will get them over the hump in the AFC.

Troy Williamson, WR, Minnesota, No. 7—Many observers were surprised that the Vikings took Williamson when USC's Mike Williams was still available, but Minnesota needed a deep threat to replace Randy Moss. They may have found him in the rangy, speedy Williamson, who averaged 19.3 yards per catch at South Carolina in 2004.

COUNTDOWN

With the Patriots defending a dynasty, the Eagles fuming over last season's loss, and Detroit hosting Super Bown XL, the 2005–06 NFL season is locked and loaded. Here's our breakdown of the divsions, the play-off teams, the fantasy players to draft, and key dates to tune in.

Miami Dolphins (6-10)

Saban's arrival good, Surtain's departure bad.

Pittsburgh Steelers (12-4)

Baltimore Ravens (11-5)

Jamal Lewis is free to return to 2003 form.

Cincinnati Bengals (8-8)

As always, the most exciting 8-8 team in the league.

Cleveland Browns (3-13)

Romeo, Romeo, wherefore art thou offense, Romeo?

Indianapolis Colts (12-4)

Must avoid Foxboro in play-offs at all costs.

Jacksonville Jaguars (10-6)

Matt Jones is the league's most intriguing rookie.

AFC SOUTH

Tennessee Titans (6-10)

Drew Bennett will not single-handedly ruin fantasy football again this year.

Houston Texans (6-10)

Carr has serious horsepower in wideout Andre Johnson.

Kansas City Chiefs (11-5)

San Diego Chargers (10-6)

L.T., Brees, and Gates keep Bolts supercharged.

Denver Broncos (8-8)

Missing the play-offs will spare the Broncos another humiliation by the Colts.

Oakland Raiders (6-10)

AFC PLAY-OFF TEAMS

Separating the contenders from the pretenders in the NFL's tougher conference.

1. New England Patriots

Sometimes it takes a little luck to win a championship. Take the Patriots escaping the Snow Bowl against the Raiders on their way to title No. 1-that was lucky. But last year New England did something almost unheard of in pro sports: They won a title despite an almost incomprehensible run of bad luck.

It began with their top receiver, Deion Branch, blowing out his knee in the second game of the season. Then starting corners Ty Law and Tyrone Poole were lost for the year. All-Pro defensive end Richard Seymour went down late in the season, and starting safety Eugene Wilson had to leave the Super Bowl with a shoulder injury. Wilson's replacement. Dexter Reid, was torched for two touchdowns, but the Patriots still hung on to win their third Super Bowl in four years.

Now the Pats will try to do two things no NFL team has done: win three straight Super Bowls, and four in five years.

2. Indianapolis Colts

While Indy coach Tony Dungy was comically outraged by last year's Monday Night Football sketch involving Terrell Owens and Nicollette Sheridan, Colts fans were more offended by his team's effort in its 20-3 play-off loss to the Patriots. The Colts gave up 210 yards rushing, and lost the time-of-possession battle in a landslide, 37:43 to 22:17.

There was a lot of feast or famine for the Colts D last year: It seemed that on every play, either Dwight Feeney made a sack, or Indy gave up a big gain. Indy addressed the problem by using five of their first six draft picks on defense.

On offense, of course, Peyton Manning and the 1,000-yard trio of Marvin Harrison, Reggie Wayne, and Brandon Stokley are back.

3. Pittsburgh Steelers

Ben Roethlisberger's motorcycle may have drawn the most off-season attention, but it's a Bus and a Duce Coupe that will carry the Steelers back to the playoffs. With all-world guard Alan Faneca clearing lanes like a snowplow. Jerome Bettis rushed for 941 vards and 13 touchdowns, and Duce Staley gained 830 vards at 4.3 yards a carry.

The new Steel Curtain may not be as dominating as the original version, but the black and gold leave teams black and blue with big hitters Joey Porter, James Farrior, Troy Polamalu, and Chris Hope crunching anything that moves.

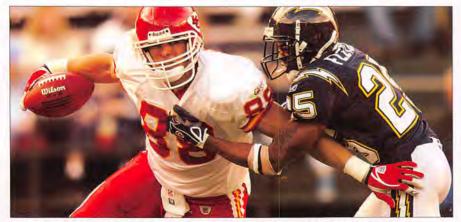

4. Kansas City Chiefs

Maybe Dick Vermeil knew what he was doing when he upset tailback Larry Johnson by announcing it was time for the kid to take off his diapers. Johnson ripped them off, taking over for the injured Priest Holmes and Derrick Blaylock, and averaging 100 yards rushing per game and scoring ten TDs during the last five games of the year.

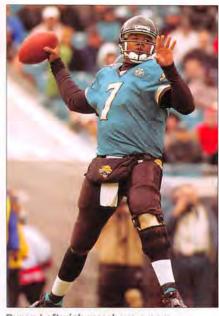

A different Johnson will be instrumental in the long-awaited defensive turnaround: The Chiefs landed the best linebacker in the nation-Derrick Johnson of Texaswith the 15th pick in the draft. He and new acquisitions Kendrell Bell, Patrick Surtain, Sammy Knight, and Carlos Hall will help Kansas City make good on its annual promise to improve the D.

5. Baltimore Ravens

The Steelers lost only one regular-season game last year; it happened to be the one Jamal Lewis, Todd Heap, Jonathan Ogden, Chris McAlister, and Deion Sanders played together for the Ravens.

Expect Ray Lewis to bounce back from a down year, as well as more greatness from QB-seeking missile Terrell Suggs.

Few people noticed, but guarterback Kyle Boller improved mightily in his second season, and he should be even better this year with the addition of receivers Derrick Mason and Mark Clayton, along with the return of a healthy, undistracted Jamal Lewis.

6. San Diego Chargers

Has Eli Manning ever been to San Diego? Who told him he'd be better off playing in the swirling winds and freezing chill of the Meadowlands than in sunny SoCal?

Drew Brees sure seemed to enjoy himself last year, throwing 27 touchdown passes and only seven interceptions. Antonio Gates-Brees's favorite targetproduced one of the greatest seasons by a tight end in NFL history, making 81 catches for 964 yards and 13 touchdowns. Gates didn't even play football in college, focusing on basketball at Kent State. Tailback LaDainian Tomlinson gained almost 1,800 yards from scrimmage and scored 18 touchdowns.

On D. linebackers Donnie Edwards and Steve Foley lead an overachieving unit that will get just enough stops to get the Bolts back to the play-offs.

Sleeper: Jacksonville Jaguars

For four months last season, the Jags went from lucky (three wins by a total of seven points) to good (beating Indianapolis on the road) to awful (getting blown out at home in a must-win game against the Texans). Which Jaguar team will show up this year?

NFC PLAY-OFF TEAMS

In the NFC, a handful of teams will battle for second behind Philadelphia.

1. Philadelphia Eagles

No team in the NFC can match the Eagles' explosive trio of quarterback Donovan McNabb, running back Brian Westbrook, and wideout supreme Terrell Owens. T.O.'s Super Bowl performance was superhuman, the best game by a losing player since Chuck Howley won the MVP in Super Bowl V.

Defensive end Jevon Kearse and free safety Brian Dawkins are game-changers on the other side of the ball. Corners Lito Sheppard and Sheldon Brown had great seasons last year, making people forget all about Troy Vincent and Bobby Taylor.

The Eagles cleared one very large obstacle last season by winning the NFC title game on their fourth try. One final hurdle remains—and you can bet Philly will be in Detroit for Super Bowl XL.

2. Atlanta Falcons

A funny thing happened while the whole world was obsessing over Michael Vick. The Falcons won their division going away despite the limitations of their quarterback.

That's right, even though he is the most exciting player in the league once he breaks the pocket, Vick was so mediocre in the pocket last year that Atlanta finished 30th in the NFL in passing. In a chicken-or-the-egg dilemma, the Falcons' brass is trying to figure out if Vick is limited by so-so receivers or his receivers—including the formerly electric Peerless Price—are limited by Vick.

Of course, it was thanks to Vick—902 yards on 7.5 yards a carry—that Atlanta had the league's most feared running game. Running backs Warrick Dunn and T. J. Duckett benefited because teams were so consumed with stopping No. 7.

Defensive end Patrick Kerney (13 sacks) and tackle Rod Coleman (11.5) give Atlanta an outside/inside combination that gets off the ball more quickly than anyone else in the league.

3. Minnesota Vikings

With all the money Mike Tice will save on headache remedies now that Randy Moss is in Oakland, he won't have to sell Super Bowl tickets to make ends meet. Even without the gifted problem child, the Vikings will put up big numbers, as Daunte Culpepper gets the ball to his less petulant emerging stars, Nate Burleson and Kelly Campbell, and rookie speedster Troy Williamson. The backfield of Michael Bennett. Onterrio "Whizzinator" Smith, Mewelde Moore, and Moe Williams may have seemed overcrowded, but with Smith suspended for '05 and Bennett's injury history, Moore and Williams are good insurance.

As deep as the Vikes are on offense, the best news in Minny is on the defensive side of the ball, where new additions Pat Williams, Napoleon Harris (who came over in the Moss trade), Fred Smoot, and Darren Sharper buttress a rapidly improving unit.

4. Seattle Seahawks

Is there anything as demoralizing to an NFL offense as the drive that stalls because someone drops a pass? The good-riddance, don't-let-the-door-hit-you-on-the-way-out cutting of Koren Robinson—after reports of his alcohol abstinence were apparently greatly exaggerated—should spare quarterback Matt Hasselbeck some of these torturous moments.

Look for the Panthers to return to 2003 form, when they reached the Super Bowl.

6. Dallas Cowboys

Cowboy fans reserved their loudest boos for aging QB Vinny Testaverde, but it was the diminishing D in Big D that did in Dallas in '04. After leading the NFL in total defense in 2003, the team slipped to 16th overall last year.

Enter first-round picks Demarcus Ware and Marcus Spears, who will bookend the Cowboys' defensive line, complement the consistent veteran Greg Ellis (24.5 sacks the last three years), and help Dallas get more pressure on opposing quarterbacks.

On offense, there are still a lot of questions for Bill Parcells's team, and it's hard Birdwatching: Dunn (28) and the Falcons are flashy, but the Eagles will rule the roost.

Apart from the end of the Robinson experiment, the only other good news for Hasselbeck is that he still plays in the weakest division in football. Seattle's already-suspect defense lost veterans Bobby Taylor and Chad Brown during the off-season.

But hey, somebody has to win the NFC West.

5. Carolina Panthers

Let's just say—hypothetically—that you wagered on the Panthers to win more than 8.5 games last year. How brutal would it have been to watch Carolina's best players go down to injury week after week, starting with All-Pro receiver Steve Smith snapping his leg in the season opener? (Very brutal. Trust me.)

Running backs Stephen Davis and DeShaun Foster and All-Pro defensive tackle Kris Jenkins were just a handful of the endless stream of Panthers piling up outside the infirmary.

Still, after a 1-7 start, ragin' Cajun QB Jake Delhomme led the Panthers on a run that briefly put them back in the playoff hunt before a heartbreaking OT loss at Atlanta. While other teams had to make major moves to try to improve during the off-season, the Panthers just had to wait for their stars to mend.

Culpepper won't miss Moss as much as you think.

to believe that Drew Bledsoe is the answer to any of them. After struggling to a 6-10 season with a slow-footed, inconsistent quarterback, Big Tuna has decided to bring in another slow-footed, inconsistent quarterback. But Parcells is a sly operator, and no one should be surprised if his reunion with Bledsoe produces one more run to the play-offs.

Sleeper: Detroit Lions

No, the Lions won't improve fast enough to play a home game in Super Bowl XL in February, but the draft-day additions of receiver Mike Williams and defensive tackle Shaun Cody, both former USC stars, will make them better on both sides of the ball.

Mark Your Calendar

There's so much parity in the NFL that it's nearly impossible to tell in August what games will matter in December. (This is why the late-season Monday Night Football matchups always suck.) But that's part of the fun of the league—the NFL may be the most unpredictable of the four major pro sports.

That said, there are a number of matchups on the schedule that hold enough promise to stoke a hearty fire of anticipation. Here are ten of them.

SEPTEMBER 8: OAKLAND RAIDERS AT NEW ENGLAND PATRIOTS

You can say a lot about Randy Moss, but you can't say the guy isn't a showman. In this opening-night matchup, Moss will strut his stuff in the silver and black for the first time, on national television, against the defending Super Bowl champs.

SEPTEMBER 25: NEW YORK GIANTS AT SAN DIEGO CHARGERS

It was one of the most memorable draftday sights in years: Eli Manning, with camera bulbs flashing all around him, holding up the San Diego Chargers jersey he so desperately wanted to avoid wearing. (His pained smile made it look like he was wearing pants that were four sizes too small.) Manning was traded to the Giants later that day. Now he will make his first appearance in front of the fans he iilted.

SEPTEMBER 25: OAKLAND RAIDERS AT PHILADELPHIA EAGLES

Moss and his Eagles doppelganger, Terrell Owens, meet at Philly's new Lincoln Financial Field. What is it about wide receivers, exactly, that makes them so selfcentered and arrogant? We're not sure, but we do know that there will be much preening in this one.

OCTOBER 2: SAN FRANCISCO 49ERS vs. Arizona Cardinals, in Mexico

For the first time in the 86-year history of the NFL, a regular-season game will be played south of the border. It won't be the first time a major U.S. sport has staged games in Mexico-baseball has held spring-training games there, and NASCAR staged a race in Mexico City last seasonbut it will get points for chutzpah. The NFL scheduled two of the worst teams in the league, San Francisco and Arizona, to play in the game, banking that a lot of people will watch out of curiosity. They're probably right. It'll be interesting to see how players weighted down with so much equipment will respond to the daunting smog and altitude of Mexico City's fabled Estadio Azteca.

OCTOBER 30: MIAMI DOLPHINS AT NEW ORLEANS SAINTS

If Ricky Williams does return to footballand Miami, the team he unceremoniously ditched last season, welcomes him back-this game will be one of his first after his four-game suspension for violating the league drug policy. And it's against the team that—under the bat-shit insane helm of Mike Ditka-traded its entire future for Williams six years ago.

OCTOBER 30: MINNESOTA VIKINGS AT CAROLINA PANTHERS

On the surface, this might not look like the most exciting matchup. The Vikings are sans Moss, and the Panthers are a bluecollar type that's successful but not all that fun to watch. But these are the two sleepers in the NFC this season-they were both underachievers a year ago and could sneak up on a lot of teams this year.

NOVEMBER 6: SAN DIEGO CHARGERS AT NEW YORK JETS

The Chargers produced a shocking season in 2004—many wags had pegged them as one of the worst teams in the league before the season started-but it may not be remembered that way by Chargers fans. They'll just remember the postseason flop against-that's rightthe Jets. San Diego will be looking for revenge here.

NOVEMBER 7: INDIANAPOLIS COLTS AT NEW ENGLAND PATRIOTS

The Patriots are Colts quarterback Peyton Manning's personal Hamburger Hill. He dominated the league last year, breaking Dan Marino's single-season touchdown record, vet bookended his season by going belly-up against New England coach Bill Belichick's schemes, first in the season opener and then in the second round of the play-offs.

NOVEMBER 28: PITTSBURGH STEELERS AT INDIANAPOLIS COLTS

The Colts aren't the only team mumbling Bill Belichick's name in their sleep. The Steelers dominated the regular season last year-even ending the Patriots' record 21game winning streak—but then Belichick and Company demolished the Steel City in the AFC championship game. This matchup is for the right to challenge the Patriots for AFC supremacy.

JANUARY 1: SEATTLE SEAHAWKS AT GREEN BAY PACKERS

The Green Bay Packers have made the play-offs four years in a row and haven't had a losing season in more than a decade. Both of those streaks could end this season, which means it's quite possible that this game, on New Year's Day, will be the final one of Brett Favre's Hall of Fame career. If so, it would be a fitting send-off-in front of the adoring cheesehead crowd at Lambeau, and across the field from Seattle coach Mike Holmgren, with whom Favre won his only Super Bowl.

AFC Championship Game

Pittsburgh at New England

The jut-lawed Bill Cowher has lost the AFC title game at home four times as coach of the Steelers.... So it will be a nice change of pace for him to lose it on the road next January.

Ben Roethlisberger will have another year of experience under his belt, but he won't be able to match Tom Brady without his favorite receiver, Plaxico Burress, and with an aging Jerome Bettis.

Go with Brady, the smartest quarterback in the league, in this one.

Patriots 27, Steelers 17

NFC Championship Game

Minnesota at Philadelphia

Daunte Culpepper will lead the Vikings to the top of the NFC's second tier. But Philly sits alone on the top tier.

Donovan McNabb is only 28 and he's already started 12 career play-off games. The double team that Terrell Owens demands guarantees that burner Brian Westbrook will be left one-on-one coming out of the backfield. No linebacker-or safety, for that matter-can run with Westbrook.

The Eagles fifth straight NFC title

Mark Fields (58) and the Panthers will return to the play-offs this season.

game will grant them their second straight trip to the Super Bowl. Eagles 38, Vikings 14

SUPER BOWL XL

New England vs. Philadelphia

When the Patriots and Eagles descend on Detroit for a rematch of Super Bowl XXXIX, New England will be looking to make history, and Philly-forever and always, it seems-will be looking for respect. McNabb's reported Super Bowl maladies from last seasondehydration, nausea, speechlessness-could have been spun as a heroic performance under brutal physical conditions. Instead, they were seen as signs that he was weak, unfit, and, worse, a choker. No quarterback has ever been so maligned for a 357yard, three-touchdown performance. And no player will ever have been so vindicated as when McNabb solves the Patriots and outguns Tom Brady in Super Bowl XL.

Eagles 27, Patriots 24

FANTASY FOOTBALL FEVER

By Ward Calhoun

According to one estimate, the average fantasy-football owner spends more than ten minutes a day checking up on his team online while at work. He (or, in some cases, she) spends close to three hours a week managing his team. That's the average, mind you: Lots of these people are above average perhaps the only time that term can be applied to them accurately. The point is, they devote way too much time to this stuff.

But who are we to judge? It's much easier to enable. Thus, we present the Penthouse guide to the 2005 fantasy-football season:

QUARTERBACKS

Blue Chip

Peyton Manning, Colts: The fact that he can't beat the Patriots is irrelevant here. In 2004, he threw 49 TD passes without breaking a sweat. The Holy Grail of fantasy players.

Daunte Culpepper, Vikings: He lost Randy Moss, but Culpepper (41 TD passes in 2004) still has plenty of talent around him.

Donovan McNabb, Eagles: The addition of Terrell Owens vaulted McNabb into the realm of the fantasy superstar.

Steady Growth

Trent Green, Chiefs: He produces solid fantasy numbers despite running an offense bereft of big-time wide receivers.

Jake Delhomme, Panthers: Almost singlehandedly, Delhomme kept his injury-plagued team in it last year, throwing 29 TD passes.

Kerry Collins, Raiders: He could always go deep, and now, with the addition of Moss, his cup overfloweth with speedy receivers.

Junk Bonds

Joey Harrington, Lions: The Motor City should discontinue this model.

Aaron Brooks, Saints: His play, like the folks on Bourbon Street, is wildly unpredictable.

Sleeper Stock

J. P. Losman, Bills: The 2004 first-round pick gets a shot in play-off-starved Buffalo.

RUNNING BACKS

Blue Chip

LaDainian Tomlinson, Chargers: Best back on the board. He ran for 17 TDs and gained 1,776 yards of total offense in '04.

Shaun Alexander, Seahawks: Four straight years of 16 or more TDs. 'Nuff said.

Willis McGahee, Bills: Bounced back from a devastating knee injury in college to gain

1,128 yards and score 13 TDs in 2004.

Steady Growth

Corey Dillon, Patriots: Dillon quietly racked up 1,635 rushing yards.

Jamal Lewis, Ravens: The Ravens hope his off-field troubles are nevermore.

Rudi Johnson, Bengals: Gained 1,454 yards last year and signed a long-term deal.

Junk Bonds

Jerome Bettis, Steelers: One final ride for the bus, then he falls apart like the Bluesmobile. Lamont Jordan, Raiders: Beware of career second bananas stepping into lead roles.

Sleeper Stock

Tatum Bell, Broncos: It seems like whoever Denver plugs into its system instantly becomes a 1,000-yard rusher.

WIDE RECEIVERS

Blue Chip

Randy Moss, Raiders: In a league full of talented, unpredictable, and egocentric WRs, Moss is the NFL leader in all categories.

Terrell Owens, Eagles: He's unpredictable, but his Super Bowl performance last year was one for the ages.

Marvin Harrison, Colts: He'll be Manning's main man for the foreseeable future.

Steady Growth

Torry Holt, Rams: Quarterback Marc Bulger's go-to guy in Mike Martz's high-flying offense. Reggie Wayne, Colts: Being Peyton Manning's second option is preferable to being a No. 1 on most teams.

Chad Johnson, Bengals: His 95 catches last year were tops in the league for wideouts. Second-year QB Carson Palmer won't leave this Chad hanging.

Junk Bonds

Muhsin Muhammad, Bears: After his killer season with Carolina, we see him hibernating with the Bears.

Deion Branch, Patriots: The New England offense distributes the ball too evenly for this fine player to have much fantasy value.

Sleeper Stock

Nate Burleson, Vikings: Minnesota drafted speedy Troy Williamson, but coach Mike Tice says Nate's his man.

TIGHT ENDS

Blue Chip

Antonio Gates, Chargers: After a breakout second season (81 catches, 13 TDs), he's not a secret anymore, but that won't matter.

Tony Gonzalez, Chiefs: He only scored seven TDs last year, but his 102 catches led the NFL. Alge Crumpler, Falcons: A killer combo of size, speed, and hands. Also seems to be the only quy on the field Michael Vick can find.

Steady Growth

Jason Witten, Cowboys: Caught 87 passes for 980 yards on a dreadful Dallas team.

Dallas Clark, Colts: Will benefit from Marcus Pollard's departure to Detroit.

Randy McMichael, Dolphins: It doesn't matter which second-rate quarterback is throwing to him—Randy is dandy.

Junk Bonds

Jeremy Shockey, Giants: The fans keep waiting for his breakout year. They shouldn't hold their breath.

Jerramy Stevens, Seattle: At 6'7''and 260 pounds, he's built like a defensive end. Maybe Seattle has an opening there.

Sleeper Stock

KICKERS

Blue Chip

Adam Vinatieri, Patriots: He's reliable, clutch, and his team is always in the red zone. What more do you want?

David Akers, Eagles: Akers is a first for Philly fans: an athlete they can't gripe about.

Sebastian Janikowski, Raiders: Dubious offfield judgment and a booming leg make Janikowski a constant threat to score.

Steady Growth

Jason Elam, Broncos: Elam, a Mile High mainstay, nailed 29 of 34 field goals last year. John Carney, Saints: Carney's show is still on the road after 18 years.

John Kasay, Panthers: Should regain 2003 form, when he made 32 of 38 FG attempts.

Junk Bonds

Mike Vanderjagt, Colts: When his foot's not in his mouth, he's a superb kicker. But Indy's offense makes him a poor fantasy value—he kicks extra points more often than field goals. Jeff Reed, Steelers: The perilous conditions at Heinz Field serve up 57 varieties of headaches for kickers.

Sleeper Stock

Mike Nugent, Jets: Won the Lou Groza award as the nation's top college kicker last year.

One of the Most Stunning Nude Debuts in Skinema History

MARIA BELLO

Dark and daring Canadian director David Cronenberg (The Fly, Crash) explores A History of Violence in his latest incendiary outing, a film version of a graphic novel about crime, punishment, and what happens as the lines blur between the two. When Lord of the Rings' Viggo Mortensen acts in self-defense against a pair of thugs holding up his diner, the local media hail him as a hero. But he soon finds his family in unforeseen jeopardy at the hand of a lunatic mob boss (Ed Harris). Maria Bello, one of modern filmdom's most singularly seductive sex bombs, plays Mortensen's wife, her signature eroticism oozing from History's every frame. Still, the best place to get hot over hard-bodied Maria is in the 2003 arthouse hit The Cooler, in which she provides the score of a lifetime to the biggest loser in Las Vegas (William H. Macy) ... and since we get to watch, everybody wins! Thirty-nine minutes into The Cooler, Maria reveals herself in the absolute raw and beds Macy for some explicit illicitness packed with an awesome eyeful of everything Maria's got up top—and Bello. In the case of The Cooler, what happens in Vegas won't stay in your pants.

but Miss Peet's teats make for some mouthwatering treats in the 2000 comedy The Whole Nine Yards. One hour and six minutes into the Bruce Willis-Matthew Perry mob farce, Amanda emerges from a bedroom brandishing a pistol utterly naked

GWYNETH PALTROW

In the big-screen adaptation of the acclaimed drama Proof, elegant Hollywood ingenue Gwyneth Paltrow strikes up an intense relationship with a college professor that culminates in what hot-and-bothered intellectuals do best-you know, talking a lot. And although we don't see Proof's eggheads getting laid, there are a happy handful of other films in which fans can bask in the glow of Oscar-winning Gwyneth's golden globes. My favorite is the 2003 biopic Sylvia, in which, at the onehour, 32-minute mark, the lusciously petite-bosomed Ms. Paltrow, portraying doomed poet Sylvia Plath, leans back on a couch after some lovin' and serves up a sumptuous helping of her adorably dainty dairy dumplings. Sylvia provides all the Proof anyone might need that Gwyneth's gorgeousness is always award-worthy.O+

"Thirty-nine minutes into The Cooler, Maria Bello beds William H. Macy for some explicit illicitness packed with an awesome eyeful of everything she's got up top."

AMANDA PEET

Ocean's Eleven and Twelve alumni George Clooney and Matt Damon continue their globe-trotting ways, albeit with a more serious spin, in the political thriller Syriana. Amid all the desert-baked derring-do, dependably delectable Amanda Peet scorches the screen as Damon's wife. Unfortunately, we don't get to see what's under Amanda's sundresses in Syriana, in one of the most stunning nude debuts in skinema history. We get a knockout blast of her Bcup chest bazookas, but a banister blocks our view of her Peet-moss below. To make up for it, Amanda leans out a window two minutes later and grants us another lingering, welllit gander at her perfectly pert milk makers. The Whole Nine Yards will give you a whole half a yard every time.

VICESTANITES

Sex From Z to A

Pure Hell

My girlfriend was taught that premarital sex is sinful, so she insists on remaining a virgin until marriage. However, when we make out, she gets so passionate that it takes all of my willpower not to rip off her panties and do her. I'm crazy about her and am willing to honor her wishes, but the hot foreplay and constant horniness are driving me up a wall. What can I do?-A.B., Massachusetts

I believe that every couple should explore their sexual compatibility before they tie the knot. However, convincing her to break her vow of premarital chastity could cause her to go on a major guilt trip, and that might threaten your relationship. Still, your horniness is quite natural, so explain your feelings to her. Ask her if it would be okay if be the perfect chick if it weren't for one thing: When I'm screwing her, she just lays there, leaving me to do all the work. How can I get her to liven up in bed?—H.B., North Carolina

Women are often led to believe that they should be passive in bed. so they assume that all they're supposed to do is just lie there. Next time you screw your Memphis belle, give her a lesson. Go down on her until she is close to orgasm, then stick your dick in deep. But rather than banging away missionary style and doing the work yourself, roll her over to the woman-on-top position, grab her ass, and rock her until she takes up the rhythm on her own. All the while, tell her, "That's the way, baby! Fuck me hard!" After she comes, tell her it was the best sex you ever had, thanks to the way she moved. I guarantee you she'll never be stiff in bed again.

ready to rev your engine. Until then, tell her you find her even sexier now that she's the mother of your child. Share the child-care duties so she's not so exhausted, or leave your daughter with her grandparents for the weekend so you can catch up on the sex you've missed. A young mother with a weekend of freedom can be very, very horny!

Bad Vibes

I think I'm a pretty good lover, but my current girlfriend always grabs a vibrator and masturbates after we have sex, even if she's come once or twice while I'm fucking her. It makes me feel like I did something wrong. Should I be worried? -H.T., Connecticut

Don't panic about your performance. Let her enjoy her toys. Get over your toy phobia by using them during sex to enhance her orgasm. Place a vibrator on her clit while you masturbated in front of her after a hot foreplay session, and encourage her to do likewise. If she's game, maybe you can move up to mutual masturbation. And remember, she might be convinced that fellatio and cunnilingus don't count as premarital sex. After all, if getting a blowjob wasn't "sex" for a former president, why should it mean anything different for you?

Bored in Bed

I'm a long-haul trucker, and there's this babe in Memphis who really turns me on. She's got huge knockers, a nice wide ass, and she's always willing to spread her legs when I roll into town. She doesn't get jealous about me banging other women, and she never nags if I don't call her. She'd

Baby Blues

My wife and I had a great sex life before our daughter was born. We made love at least three times a week, and often more than once a night. Now, I'm lucky if I get it once a month! All I hear is "I'm too tired," or "I'm not in the mood." Is this normal?-F.F., Arizona

Your wife's lack of libido is normal right now. Not only is caring for an infant demanding—which is why she's so tired-but her hormonal balance has been altered to help her cope with your daughter's needs. And she's probably still carrying extra pounds and may not feel very sexy.

Fortunately for you, this lull won't last long. When your wife stops nursing, her hormonal balance will return to normal, and she'll be she's riding you cowgirl style, or plant a Pocket Rocket on her pubes while doing it doggie-style. If she is into anal sex, stick a dildo in one orifice while fucking the other (a "one-man DP"). With practice, she might get used to having such massive orgasms during intercourse that she'll forgo the postcoital use of toys. Even if she still wants her vibrator, don't fret. Take the toy yourself and give her the finishing touch she desires.

SEXPERIMENT

Dedicating My Body to Science

I'm doing it all in the name of research!

This month: THE G-SHOT

A few months ago I read about the G-SHOT, a new technique for increasing the intensity of vaginal orgasms. An ob-gyn injects collagen in a woman's G spot to plump it and increase its sensitivity. My clitoral orgasms have always been much more powerful than my vaginal ones, so I had to see if the G-SHOT would help me reach new heights.

My gyno measured where my G spot should be, numbed it with a local anesthetic, and injected the collagen. The whole procedure took about ten minutes and was pretty painless, but it did cost $1,800—now that hurt! My G spot throbbed for a couple of hours, but not in a good way.

Although the good doc told me I could have sex in four hours, my vagina seemed to have a headache and I decided to wait until the next day. When I did have sex, I did climax faster than usual and my vaginal orgasm felt deeper and stronger. But it was not the earth-shattering experience I had been waiting for. Would I do it again? No—for that kind of money, I can find better ways to get myself off.

LOVE SWING

Don't just leave her hanging sex swings let you experiment with tricky positions.

SEX DEVICE OF THE MONTH

Sex Swings

What: A collection of straps that support the butt, thighs, and back, suspended from the ceiling or from a stand. My favorite is the Love Swing by California Exotic Novelties at CalExotics.com, popularized in Sex and the City—the padded straps are soft and comfortable for feet, ankles, calves, and thighs. A good bargain pick is the Sex Swing by Topco, but its unpadded straps can be painful. I also recommend the Sex Swing Stand, available at PleasureMeNow.com, so you don't bring down the ceiling and get kicked out of your apartment. How: One person gets in the swing, and the motion of the swing does all the dirty work. Play it safe—a long "swing and a miss" could put a painful crimp in your cock.

Why: You can experiment with new positions, and many women love the weightless, bouncy feeling.

The Downside: It's hard to store, and you can't exactly leave it out when your mother-in-law comes to visit. There's also a weight limit, which varies by model, so run the numbers before you get in.

TOP 10

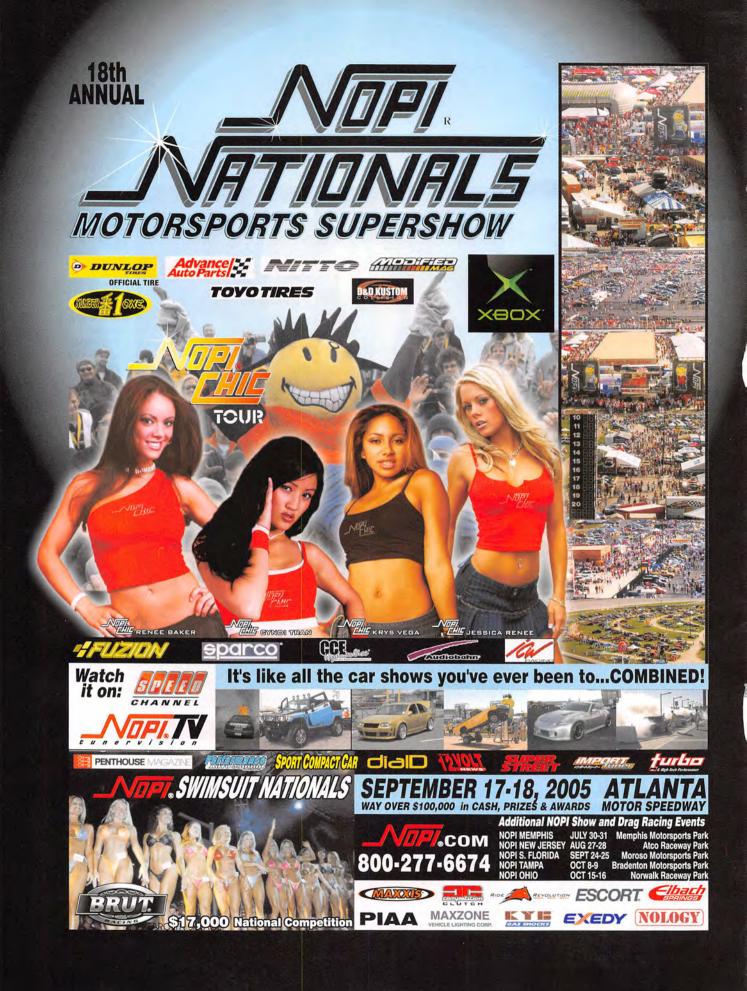

Clues She Wants You

These subtle signals will let you know you have the green light.

- 1. She laughs. When a woman is interested, she wants to make you feel like you're the funniest guy in the world.
- 2. She plays with her hair.
 Smoothing, twirling, and twisting are all good signs.
- 3. She's a klutz. Fidgeting or fumbling shows that her heart is going pitter-patter.

- 4. She blushes. Compliment her sexy lips. If she blushes, you're in. If she says, "Thanks, I just got collagen," move on.
- 5. She gets mouthy. Licking, pouting, puckering, or biting her lips means she's thinking about being kissed.
- 6. She stutters. Unless she has a speech impediment, you can assume your animal magnetism is making her tongue-tied.
- 7. She leans in. If she's moving closer, she's looking for more intimacy. Now is a good time to intensify your conversation.

- 8. She averts her eyes. If she lowers her eyes when you catch her staring, it's the next best thing to a handwritten invitation.
- 9. She touches herself. No, not like that. If she's hot for you, she may start caressing her face, hands, thighs, or breasts. Unless there's a male stripper in the room, you should be checking your condom supply.
- 10. She touches you. If she touches your arm or leg as you talk, or brushes up against you as you walk, it's time to ask, "Your place or mine?"

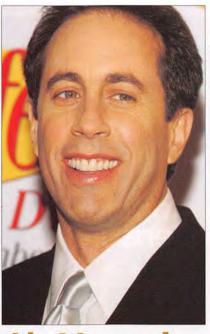

DREAMS DIVERSIONS

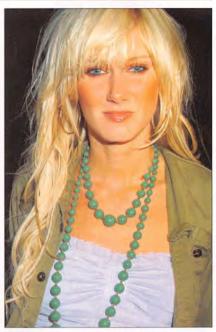

Good Point

Debbie Mathers, on her famous son, Eminem: "People think what a cool, tough guy he is. They should remember he actually lived home with his mom until he was 26.

his childhood home: "My mother kept an extra roll of toilet paper that had a little knit hat and a pom-pom, our dog had a sweater, and the couch had little fabric toupees. I never felt the need to try drugs. My reality was already altered."

Ah, Memories Among His Souvenirs

After Rod Stewart's daughter Kimberly had her breast implants removed, she framed and autographed them, then gave them to friend Jack Osbourne, son of Ozzy. Jack now displays them on a wall in his room.

Only in America

A New York television reporter was fired after yelling "What the fuck is your problem, man?" during a live remote (he said he didn't realize he was still on the air). The incident spurred the creation of products that include mugs, T-shirts, buttons, tote bags, and barbecue aprons, all emblazoned with the blurted phrase.

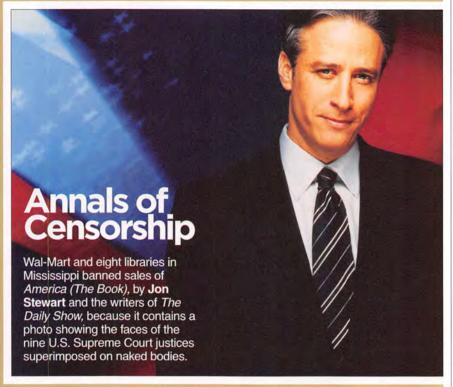

Sharp Shooters

Officials of an Idaho town said they will pay nearly $7,000 to several residents whose property was damaged by shots fired by local police pursuing an armed robber. The cops fired 22 shots, none of which came anywhere near the robber. Bullet holes were found in garage doors, windows, an SUV, and a clothes dryer.

Embarrassed officials in New York learned that known sexual predators obtain free Viagra under the state's Medicaid program. Auditors found that Level Three offenders-violent rapists and child molesters—were given the performance-enhancing drug because of a federal law that mandates state Medicaid programs must pay for Viagra for those unable to afford it. Why state officials failed to draw a distinction between ordinary citizens and violent sexual offenders remains unanswered.

Life at the Top

A British billionaire bankrolled what ranks as probably the most lavish bar mitzvah ever: a $7 million extravaganza that featured 200 guests flown to the ceremony in chartered jets, stays at a $2,000-a-night hotel, the building of a temporary synagogue on hotel grounds, and a post-ceremony party that featured entertainment by R&B superstar Beyoncé.

Good Question

Actor Joe Piscopo, on his reported plans to run for governor of New Jersey: "I would really enjoy being governor, and it would be such an honor. Plus, there're no scandals in my life that would pop up later. Okay, I ran off with the babysitter! How am I going to hide that?"

First Amendment Award to ...

... the wife of Kenya's president, who, infuriated over a newspaper account that was critical of her actions at a state function, stormed into the paper's office, confiscated office supplies, then sat for several hours at the editor's desk and berated the staff. When a TV news crew showed up, she slapped a cameraman.

Our Nation's Criminal Masterminds at Work

A Bronx teenager hijacked a car at gunpoint, sped off, and headed for the Battery Tunnel—where he discovered he didn't have enough cash for the $4.50 toll. That discovery occurred in the E-ZPass lane, and since the car didn't have a pass, a suspicious cop on duty asked the driver for his license and registration. The thief had no license, and it was immediately obvious he wasn't the registered owner of the car.

Faced with scientific evidence that its popular painkiller Vioxx could cause heart attacks, the Merck pharmaceutical company ordered its salesmen to avoid any discussions of the problem, according to documents released at a congressional hearing. The salesmen were advised that when taking doctors to lunch, they were to observe perfect table manners and invoke Martin Luther King Jr.'s famous "I Have a Dream" speech, telling doctors they would be "free at last" if they prescribed Vioxx.

The Deepening Judi Dench Mystery

Actress Judi Dench revealed that she passes the time between movie takes embroidering what she calls "naughty needlework," tapestries that include hidden expletives. One of them, she said, had FUCK OFF stitched throughout the design.

... Texas politicians, who tried—and, thankfully, failed—to ban "sexually suggestive" routines by cheerleaders at school events. The sponsor of the legislation said the routines involved too many wriggling bottoms, gyrating hips, and seductive use of pom-poms.

TPRIVATE

Growing up in a conservative family in small-town Ohio, Taya Parker has always loved defying expectations—like when she performed her first striptease. "I was a Catholic school girl who took her clothes off onstage at age 19!" the 32D-22-32 dancer says. "I was petrified, but it was exhilarating to discover myself on a whole new level. I really learned what I was made of."

No, no harm at all.

London Prices Falling Down

How does a hotel bed in central London for less than $10 a night sound?

That's the promise of Stelios Haji-loannoul, founder of Europe's major discount air carrier, easyJet. He envisions a new chain of hotels called easyHotel that will offer rooms in pricey European cities for as little as $10 a night.

The concept behind easyHotel is that the earlier you book, the less you pay. As rooms get reserved, the price per room increases. It's similar to the strategy behind the company's chain of Internet cafés (the fewer people on computers when you walk in, the less you pay per minute).

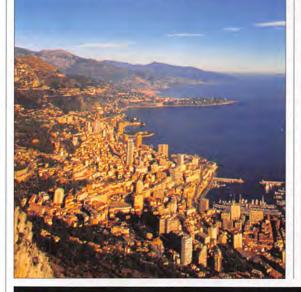

You can bet easyHotel rooms will be spartan. In fact, the 100square-foot rooms have been called "a mini storage locker for your body." You'll get a very orange room (that's easyGroup's signature color) with a platform double bed, a wall-mounted toilet, a small sink, and a shower. A closet and a couple of reading lamps complete the décor. There's no phone, television, or windows, and if you want your room cleaned, you'll have to pay extra. Rates start at $10 and rise to a maximum of $110. Not bad for London, where the average nightly hotel rate is more than $200. The London property is expected to open any day, and bookings can be made at EasyHotel.com. The company hopes to franchise similar properties in major cities throughout

Privy Auction
Where can you find Monte Carlo vacation packages on auction? eBay? Nope.

Go to Monaco Auction.com, which offers lodging packages below retail if you're a shrewd bidder. Here's a sample offering from a June auction: three nights in early fall in a double room at the ultra-swanky Monte Carlo Beach Hotel (right at the water's edge, near the cabanas where pushcarts sell bottles of iced champagne), plus two round-trip tickets on Swiss International Air Lines from New York, Chicago, Boston, Los Angeles, or Miami. Plus a host of extras, including a leather jewelry gift box, a welcome glass of bubbly, and free entry into the principality's casino, spa, and private beach. Bidding began at $1,799, with a retail value of $2,699.

Street Smarts

You may think your credit card offers insurance when you rent a car, but beware of exceptions.

Every smart traveler knows accepting a rental-car company's offer of insurance is a sucker move: The daily price may be as high as the daily rental rate. But before you initial those "decline coverage" boxes, make sure you know how good a friend your credit card really is. Determine whether it provides primary or secondary coverage. If it's the latter, that means your regular car insurance is first in line to pay for any damageswhich could increase your premiums. Remember all that tinvtype-laden paperwork you received when your credit card arrived? If you read closely, you'll find you won't be covered when renting a car in several countries overseas. Those are most likely Italy, Ireland, Australia, and Israel. In Italy, insurance on rental cars is sky-high. My tip is, if you're going to be driving around northern Italy, fly into Geneva, rent a car at the airport. and drive the short distance south to Italy. Then you're covered.

Consider buying used hotel furniture. The lodging industry is enjoying a steady rise in business and room rates, and hotel chains are racing to update rooms that grew stale after the downturn in travel that followed 9/11. Here are some typical recent bargains: 19-inch TV for $39; carved and mirrored armoires for $200; complete bed sets, including headboard, for less than $100. Money Bags

No, that's not a tip, sirit's a mandatory fee.

At Seattle-Tacoma International Airport, several airlines are charging $2 per bag for checking luggage with a curbside agent. This is an experiment, but what used to be a free service everywhere may soon be a thing of the past. Airlines are trying to find ways to make money without raising ticket prices. United, Northwest, and others are hoping if Seattle passengers don't revolt, these new fees can be rolled out nationwide.

Hellmuth

With a record nine World Series of Poker gold bracelets to his name, Phil Hellmuth is one of the top card players in the world.

How often do you play poker, apart from money tournaments?

It depends on the month. Sometimes I'll play as much as 30 hours on Ultimate Bet.com. Then other weeks I won't play at all. I'm a professional poker player, but I like to have more in my life.

What other things would you like to have going on?

I expect to do a lot of great things in my life. I expected to write a book and get it on the New York Times bestseller list, and I did that. I got lucky. I expect to have a movie made about my life. Right now we have one of the top five actors in the world committed to play me, and the script is done. I will tell you this: Ashton Kutcher does it too much, you can call a floorman over and the player will get a warning. If he does it again, he gets a 20-minute penalty.

But haven't you been accused of being a poor loser and a loudmouth?

It's fair to say I'm a poor loser, absolutely. I'm worse than anybody when it comes to losing a big pot. Someone tried to calm me down the other day after I took a bad beat, and I'm usually freaking out for five, ten minutes. But it's totally different when you're doing things to distract a person or take him off his game. Also, there's no surprise when I go off. People who are at my table will usually say, "Things could get pretty entertaining with Phil Hellmuth here."

What was your most memorable "bad beat"?

Probably the 2001 final table at the World Series of Poker. I'm playing against Phil Gorjump and you can sense it. You have to pay attention to people. We tend to do things the same way. I see someone who makes a big bluff, and I watch exactly what they did. How did they put their chips in? Were they talking? Does it make sense for them to make a move?

Is anything worse than being beat with pocket aces? Annie Duke beat me when I had pocket kings. She had pocket eights and drew an eight. It's not much fun when you get beat with good hands like that.

ESPN commentator Norman Chad gives you a lot of grief. Will you guys be hanging out anytime soon? For a long time I thought I had slighted this guy. I asked him once, "Did I ever do something to piss you off?"

And he said no! My parents hate him, but he's going to earn me an extra ten to 100 million dollars. He has turned said no, Leo DiCaprio said no, and so did Tobey Maguire. That being said, the guy who said yes is arguably one of the hottest actors in the world right now.

Is this actor an avid poker player who is married to Jennifer Garner?

I will neither confirm nor deny. I will say the actor in question is under 30.

Is there trash-talking during tournaments?

I don't know if you'd call it trash-talking. It's more like teasing, and if someone don, who was totally unknown in the world of poker. He was some random amateur. There's 1.2 million in the pot. Man, was I pissed. Gordon got lucky. That one stands out. Normally I'm depressed for four to five hours after getting knocked out. This one lasted 12 days.

Do you like being known as the "Poker Brat"?

I wasn't too thrilled when people first started calling me that. But it's worked to my advantage and I've made some great money.

That's a bunch of garbage. Look, it comes down to the fact that when you get to higher-stakes tables, you are normally playing against the best players in the game today. There are people like Phil Ivey who have killed at these types of tables. If there were collusion going on, he wouldn't stand a chance.

What do you look for in your opponents as they are looking at their two cards?

I'm checking everyone out. Sometimes when someone is dealt pocket aces, they just me into the bad boy of poker, which wasn't hard considering all the whining I do at the table. So yes, I would have a drink with the guy.

Can the average person make a living with poker? Bottom line is, if you're good, ves. I know one person who made $500,000 this year just playing online. What kind of change are you making?

With endorsements and other business ventures, it could be in the triple-digit millions.O1

Your Guide to Looking Good

The Body. Edic

Think all these lotions and potions aren't for you?

Think again. Today's man does more than just shower and shave; he sprays, sloughs, and slathers to get a leg up on the competition.

It's okay to admit it. You've shaken, sniffed, and sampled your way through your girlfriend's conditioners, cleansers, and creams, and you've wondered if any would work for you—if only you could make sense of it all. With so many body parts to keep in check, it's hard to know where to begin. But there's no reason to smell like a girl! Manufacturers are stepping up to the plate with products specifically for men. Go out and grab a few; experiment until you find fragrances and textures that make you feel so good in your own skin, you'll be cozying up closer to hers in no time.

CLEAN SLATE

Bar soap is so last century. It gets the job done, but without any fun. For a truly rich shower experience, suds up with a body wash. Caswell-Massey's Original Body Cleanser from the Dr. Hunter's line is natural and fragrance-free, and, like all C-M products, is not tested on animals (CaswellMassey .com).... Billy Jealousy believes the only place to be dirty is the bedroom. The company's Ocean Front Body Wash is designed to cleanse away dirt and sweat without robbing skin of essential moisture. It will leave you smelling—and feeling—as fresh as a cool breeze (BillyJealousy.com).... For a more traditional scent, try Suave for Men Active Sport Body Wash—perfect for after a workout (Suave.com).

READY FOR YOUR CLOSE-UP?

Your face requires a cleanser of its own, so treat your mug right with a product specially formulated for it. Clinique Skin Supplies for Men offers Liquid Face Wash, a thorough, nondrying cleanser that also preps skin for shaving (Clinique.com).... The folks at Sircuit are passionate about skin care. X-Trap Daily Gentle Face Wash is enriched with shea butter to soften and soothe. It is so gentle, it's okay for use even after laser or micro-dermabrasion procedures (SircuitSkin.com).... Afraid of the dark? Don't be. Skin Saver from Maxwell's Apothecary pours black but lightens as you lather. It smells so great. your lady friend will leave her girly goods at her place and wash up with this instead (MaxwellsOnline.com).... Wetter is better, right? So don't forget to moisturize. Avon's PROExtreme Maximum Performance Energizing Face Moisturizer (Avon.com) fights the signs of aging, while Zirh's Defend is a moisturizer and sunscreen in one (Zirh.com).

GOOD HEAD

You shampoo, but do you also condition? A mop that's exposed to the damaging effects of hair products, sun, and pollutants could use an extra dose of protection. The folks at Sharps Barber and Shop like to say their products are "made for men, snatched by women." Their Mission: Control Daily Shampoo and Mission: Control Daily Conditioner are safe for all hair types, including chemically treated, so go ahead-let her rub one out (SharpsUSA.com).... Men-u Healthy Hair & Scalp Shampoo from the U.K. is great for frequent use. Pair it with SLIC, a lightweight leave-in conditioner that makes hair feel thicker. The bottles are considerably smaller than what you're used to, but the Ultra Concentrate formulas pack a punch (Men-uUSA.com).... Looking to save time and space? L'Oréal's VIVE for Men Anti-Dandruff 2-in-1 Shampoo & Conditioner targets men's top hair-care concerns, thickening and texturizing hair while fighting itching and flaking (LorealParisUSA.com).

TAKE IT OFF

If shaving leaves your face in bad shape, the problem may be in the prep work-or your lack thereof. Baxter of California's Super Close Shave Formula combines peppermint, rosemary, and chamomile for a protective barrier between skin and razor (BaxterofCalifornia .com). For a truly luxe experience, forgo using your fingers and opt for a brush. Tweezerman's Deluxe Shaving Brush has a lifetime guarantee and is 100 percent badger hair—preferred for working up a rich lather (Tweezerman.com).... If an electric razor is more your speed, try Lectric Shave, a pre-shave tonic that helps whiskers stand up stiff so you can get as close as you would with a regular blade (LectricShave.com).

PIT STOP

Nothing turns a girl off faster than a whiff of B.O. With New Degree for Men Ultra Clear Deodorant, you'll avoid telltale white streaks, and it works to eliminate odors before they start (DegreeDeodorant.com).... Old Spice is the No. 1 male antiperspirant/deodorant and personal-cleansing brand in the United States, so odds are you're familiar with it. Pick up a Red Zone Invisible Solid in the new After Hours scent, which uses Controlled Release Scent to keep the aroma going continuously, not just when you apply it. It's for guys like you who don't end the day just because the sun goes down (OldSpice.com).... Break from the pack and ditch your standard stick for a hip deodorant body spray. The eight fragrances from AXE are designed to be sprayed under your arms and across your chest. The can is easy to grip and shaped to fit just about anywhere: backpacks, glove compartments, desk drawers. And unlike most aerosol cans, AXE sprays are outfitted with precision nozzles to prevent overapplication (TheAXEEffect.com). Your girl will thank you for it, but perhaps she should be thanking us.

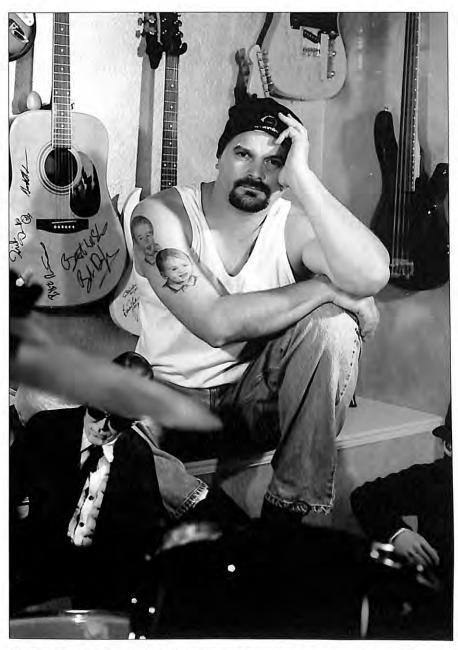

Interview

In an era of image-conscious, corporatesponsored, personality-free athletes, Red Sox left-hander David Wells strides defiant as ever, invoking the gritty heroes of baseball's golden age. In a conversation with Dave Hollander, Wells doesn't hold much back. Then again, he never does. I hat's why we like him.

THETHETHETHETHETHE

Photographs by Tom DiPace

Everything about David Wells, from his nickname (Boomer) to his beefy frame (six-foot-three, 248 pounds) to his image (unvarnished), suggests the Ty Cobb-Babe Ruth era of baseball. Wells is a guy who speaks his mind, regardless of how it might affect his image. His training regimen is, well, relaxed (think booze and babes. not steroids and personal trainers). Yet he still delivers the goods on the mound, and he's often at his best when the stakes are high.

Indeed, Wells is one of the last authentic major leaguers in the game. Consider the 1998 season, when Mark McGwire and Sammy Sosa made their now-dubious assault on Roger Maris's home-run record, with McGwire belting 70 round-trippers and Sosa 66. In that homer-happy season, Wells went 18-4, producing the best winning percentage in the American League (.818). He also twirled five shutouts, pitched a perfect game, and helped the Yankees win the World Series. And no one doubts that he did it all without performance-enhancing drugs. Unless you count beer.

Now, after stops in Detroit, Cincinnati, Baltimore, Chicago, and San Diego, as well as two stints each in Toronto and New York, Wells again finds himself in the thick of the fiercest rivalry in U.S. sports, Yankees versus Red Sox. Only this time, he's on the other side of the divide, pitching for Boston. After etching himself into Yankees lore with his clutch performances, his reverence for Babe Ruth, and his Ruthian appetites for nightlife, barroom brawls, A-list celebrity pals, and nose-to-nose confrontations with Yankees owner George Steinbrenner.

"I've lost all respect for New York fans.... New York is my city. I love it. But to get the 'fuck you, motherfucker' from the fans? I've washed my hands of them. Of all people, I would never expect them to do that."

Boomer is pitching for the Yanks' arch-

I met Wells in his hotel room recently, and he lived up to his larger-than-life persona. He greeted me in shorts and bare feet, a sleeveless T-shirt, and a baseball hat. Detailed portrait tattoos of his sons, Brandon and Lars, have been inked onto the ample canvas of his right arm. Despite his beach attire, Wells had the air conditioning on full blast. I didn't ask why. The Rolling Stones' "19th Nervous Breakdown" cranked from an iPod parked in a Bose docking system. Pretty good sound, I thought.

He turned off the music for our interview, but quickly got frustrated by interruptions from numerous calls to his room phone and his inability to disable the receiver. With a mischievous glint in his eye, he sprang from the couch and said, "I'll turn that fucker off." He yanked the phone cord from the wall jack, and that was that.

You're in a unique position to evaluate the Yankees-Red Sox rivalry, having been on both sides. What's the biggest difference between the two clubhouses?

There's a huge, huge difference. New York is a pretty mild-mannered clubhouse. Not a whole lot goes on except for guys in the lounge throwing food down their throats, and Derek Jeter wearing his headphones and singing in some high-pitched voice, which is always comical. But in Boston ... my God! Everywhere guys are screaming and yelling. [Kevin] Millar gives you this evil laugh and shouts, "Fuck you!" He'll do that all day. Millar is the loudest of the group. He's funny. This clubhouse [in Boston] is so bizarre. There's not just one clown. There's 25 clowns. And they're all having a good time. In there it's like, Do whatever you want. It's our clubhouse.... They're the idiots, man.

Being idiots won Boston a World Series. Perhaps the Yankees' rules on player appearance, like no long hair and no beards, are starting to hold them back. Should they loosen up and throw out the razors?

I thought they should've done it back in '97 when I first signed on. But you've got an owner who's paying you a lot of money. It's his team and his image. A lot of it might be Joe Torre as well. He wants that clean-cut image. They call it professionalism. But to me, we're grown men. We should be able to grow our hair, have beards, or, hell, even dye our mustaches if we want.

By my own unofficial study, I estimate that Mike Piazza loses 60 points on his batting average every time he's clean-shaven.

A Mets fan, are you? Well, I guess you gotta be a fan of somebody.

That hurts. So let's stay with the Yanks for a minute. During your first season with the Yankees, you threatened to punch out George Steinbrenner during a clubhouse argument. Yet he brought you back in 2003, and today you guys have a warm relationship. It's got to kill him to see you in a Red Sox uniform.

You know what? It kills all of New York. When I came to New York on opening day, I got so much hatred. Hatred. The boos I can deal with. But "you motherfucker," "you piece of shit," "you traitor," "you suck" ... I heard it all, and a lot of it came from the bleacher creatures. It was as bad as warming up in Cleveland when they talked shit about my mom after she passed away. I've lost all respect for New York fans for them to do that to me. I tried to come back to New York. [Yankees GM Brian] Cashman said he was going with youth. And then they signed Randy [Johnson, 42 years old]. New York is my city. I love it. But to get the "fuck you, motherfucker" from the fans? I've washed my hands of them. Of all people, I would never expect them to do that.

Would you consider a front-office job with the Yankees after your playing days?

Probably not. I'm trying to pitch another thing: a Wayne's World—meets—pay-perview baseball TV show. It's gotta be HBO or pay-per-view, because we'd be dropping some F-bombs. I think it would be good because a lot of people are tired of hearing these announcers sucking up to players. Just put us in the soundproofed booth up there where we can say, "How the fuck did that guy make that catch?" Or "What the hell's he doing in this league?"

Maybe the Yankees could return to the freewheeling wife-swapping days

Maybe the Yankees could return to the freewheeling wife-swapping days of the 1970s, when Fritz Peterson and Mike Kekich traded spouses?

I'm sure there are athletes out there, whatever sport it is, checking out the other guy's wife, wishing he could have her, and maybe vice versa. But they ain't got the balls enough to hook up. I couldn't do it. But if I was gonna do it, then my advice is just flat out do it. And hopefully the other guy is training your wife so that way you're even.

Is there one player on the Yankees right now that you'd really like to beat?

I'd like to beat George [Steinbrenner]. Look, I think he's great. He's done well by me, and we've had our altercations. I stood up to that man and I think he respects it more. But whenever you see an owner who's that involved, it's always, "Beat him."

Much has been said and written about your fascination with Babe Ruth. What would he have said if someone offered him steroids?

He'd tell 'em to take a hike and beat the shit out of them. I honestly believe that, because he's a guy who enjoyed life off the field. He loved to drink, he loved to eat, and he loved to hosebag around. I think if you're successful, you don't need anything.

In your 2003 memoir, Perfect I'm Not, you pissed off some league officials by claiming that 25 to 40 percent of big leaguers used steroids and that amphetamines were commonplace. Now what do they have to say to you?

When Chris Kreski wrote the book with me he asked me about steroid use, and I said if I had to guess, it was probably ten to 15 percent. When the galley copies came out, they read 40 percent—and that's the only thing everybody concentrated on through the whole book. Then I got fined $100K by the Yankees for writing I had a hangover [when I pitched a perfect game for them in 1998]. Jeezus! Mickey Mantle had hangovers. Babe Ruth had them. It started way before me. And I tarnished the Yankees' image?

What would you have said if Congress had asked you to testify in the hearings on steroids in baseball? I wouldn't have pulled a Sammy Sosa, where all of a sudden it's, "No comprende.

What did you make of the hearings? Overall, I think it was good because there are guys out there who've been on steroids who've taken me deep, and I'm pissed off about it. I've never touched the stuff. I'm looking good with 200-something wins, done with all fat and muscle. No by-products, man, this is it. These other guys are all yoked, chiseled. There are guys in the game only because of steroids. They couldn't make it with their natural talent, so they had to enhance themselves. It sucks. It really does.

Of all the commissioners in each of the major sports, which is the biggest tool?

No doubt, it's Bud Selig, man. [Laughs] I made a statement in spring training where I called him a dickhead, and he was on the phone nonstop with [Red Sox GM] Theo Epstein and [Red Sox manager] Terry Francona. In the congressional hearing, he didn't know what to do, so he basically pointed the finger at [the players]. You're a commissioner and you say you want to hear everybody's thoughts? Well, he never mentioned anything to me about my book. You could easily say that was a cry for attention just two years ago. He needs to put a little more effort into this, instead of going on BudSelig.com every day to read all the bad things that are said about him.

In your book, there was one photo of you standing naked in a field of sheep. Were any of those animals harmed, degraded, or abused during the taking of that photo?

They got scared and ran away. I've heard the old saying "Men are men, and sheep are scared" since I was a kid. So I was over in New Zealand and I wanted to see if it was true. I ran out there naked toward a ton of sheep and they took off running. They were scared.

Obviously you're a guy who knows how to have fun. Players today are so consumed with protecting their image, they end up looking boring. Where did the big personalities in baseball go?

That's a good question. There are still a few of us left. Every team's got a character. Mark Buehrle with the White Sox has some rebel in him. He can keep the legacy of Boomer alive. My baseball soul mate was David Cone, who retired two years ago. He was an ambassador with the media, but he also had another side where he liked to have fun-cut up, hang out with the boys, and talk a lot of shit.

I see a superstar like Barry Bonds, and he looks joyless. Maybe steroids are making him hit the ball farther-[Wells laughs, rolls his eyes, and hums the theme from The Twilight Zone.] Okay—but they're not making him any happier as a human being. Look, he's under the microscope. If he's out at a titty bar or a fine restaurant, it's in the paper. He has this thing with his mistress. Hey, that's fine. People get lonely. Maybe his world isn't as great as it seems to be. He's got all the money, the fame, but maybe he's not happy. I guess he's a rebel behind closed doors. For me, I don't give a shit. If I want to do something, I'm gonna do it. I'll tell you where I'm going. If I'm cheating on my wife, I'm gonna tell her, "Hey, listen. I'm sorry I did that." Why lie? It may break your relationship up, but at least have the balls to admit your own doing.

Jose Canseco admitted to injecting steroids to help his teammates. Will you now admit to helping your teammates shotgun a beer to improve their performance?

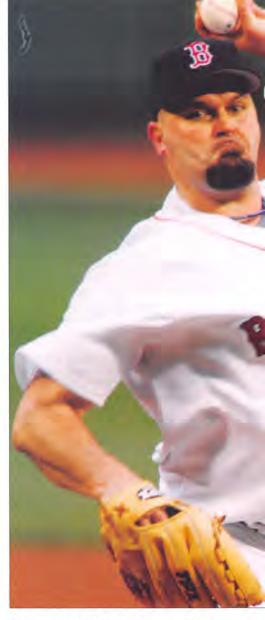

Yes I can! I think a lot of organizations would rather see you drink beer than soda. With soda, they might point to you and say you're on a sugar highlike an amphetamine. But with beer, it relaxes you-makes you see the ball better. You're not rushing in your delivery. That's what a beer does.

You've gotten better with age. You won 20 games with Toronto at age 37 and were the ace of the Yankees staff (19-7) at age 39. What are your secrets for stamina and longevity?

A lot of porn. I get Spectravision in all the American hotels. I wish they had them in Toronto. [Laughs] Look, if you love the game and you have the fire inside, you can pretty much accomplish anything you want to. And I love this game more than anybody. I never worked out until I hired a trainer in 2001, after my back surgery. I might not look it. but I'm in better shape this season than I was then. I'm stronger and I feel a lot better. But before 2001, I never really worked out. Freak of nature, I guess. I don't sweat the small shit. I never want to come out of games. And I want to be in the big games because I'm not afraid to fail. I think if you can accept that failing is okay, there's so much shit a person can do.

We all know you live a wild life off the field, but on the mound, you're all about control. You've had the league's best walks-per-nine-innings ratio four times in your career. Where does your pitching discipline come from?

Just playing catch. When I go out on the field every day, I play catch with a purpose—not just to throw the ball to get my arm loose. I'll pick a spot on your shoulder, or I'll aim for your head. And it doesn't matter if it's from 60 feet or 200 feet. I still try to throw on line and hit that frame. Plus, I pay attention to my release point, which helps me for when I'm on the mound.

Even in a simple game of catch you're building good habits.

Right. And those habits I take to the field. When I'm out there every five days, I should make it easy on an umpire. Lately they've been squeezing me, and I've been arguing with these sons of bitches. I know the strike zone better than them. Yet I see guys struggling and umpires giving them calls, and I'm out there around the plate not getting calls. I have a hard time with that. Maybe I'll come back as an umpire and piss everybody off.

Derek Jeter hosted a memorable

Saturday Night Live in 2001. But the big applause came at the end of a sketch when you and David Cone appeared in drag as Skank No. 1 and Skank No. 2. How did Cone deal with being in the number-two slot?

I'm bigger than him, so I'm a bigger skank and deserving of numberone billing. Getting into that dress was a trip. I didn't think they made 'em that big. I was worried about my tits because I kept playing with them, thinking, Damn, these feel good! I was actually supposed to host it but I got butted, you know, because it's Derek Jeter, man. But he did a tremendous job.

It sounds like you hit all the right SNL parties. What was the best one you've ever been to?

The 25-year anniversary was probably the best. That was outstanding. I'm in

"There are guys out there who've been on steroids who've taken me deep, and I'm pissed off about it. I've never touched the stuff. I'm looking good with 200-something wins, done with all fat and muscle.... There are guys in the game only because of steroids.

It sucks. It really does."

the bathroom taking a piss, and I've got Michael Keaton to the right of me and Michael Douglas to the left of me. So I'm pissing and I'm looking at both of 'em, and I just start laughing. So I said, "What's up, Michaels?" They just stared for a minute, then Michael Keaton recognized me. After we washed our hands, we shook hands. Then I go walking down the hall and I run into Dan Aykroyd. I'm talking with him and waving my hands as I talk, and when Catherine Zeta-Jones walks by, I accidentally hit her right in the boob. And I'm like, Oh shit. So here comes Michael Douglas walking down the hall and Dan says, "How dare you grab Ms. Zorro's tit like that!" And I'm like, "I'm sorry, I'm sorry. It was an accident." She says, "I know. It's no problem." And I was so fucking embarrassed. Then Michael Douglas walks over to us, glares at me, grabs her, and walks away. And Dan's just laughing his ass off. Despite the baseball rivalry, there's really no comparison between New York and Boston nightlife, is there?

Instead of Beantown, they should call Boston Cameratown. These fucking people—everyone walks around with their camera or a cell-phone camera. It's a joke. I don't go out anymore. I come to New York, I can walk anywhere and not get bothered. It's great. Do you still get a chance to visit your old New York haunts?

Oh yeah! New York is great. But you gotta respect the city because it can beat your ass up a little bit. And you gotta watch out for the "Page Six" people floating around trying to get you.
On your Website, Boomer3.com, I read that for $3,500 I can go buck hunting with you and Kirk Gibson at Buckfalls Ranch in Millersburg, Michigan. What's included in that eco-vacation package?

lt's a five-night hunting spree. We started operations last year after eight years of working on it. Right now it's word of mouth, but there's some monster buck up there that are fucking phenomenal. We're trying to get corporate people—get like four or five, and charge 'em 75 grand each. We'll make all the food, do all the cooking, and guide them. We'll do everything but wipe their ass.

If the TV thing doesn't pan out, are you still planning to be a rock star after you're done with baseball?

I'm not going to be a rock star, because I can't play guitar. But I wanted to be a roadie/security guard/personal assistant to a rock band. I just saw Bon Jovi up in Boston and I was talking with David Bryan, who I know best in the band. He said, "Fucking c'mon, man." My buddy Noel threw a party for me at Veruka once and Penny Marshall, who is a dear friend, was there with the wife of the founder of Rolling Stone magazine. I told Penny I wanted to be a roadie and work for a rock band. She said, "Are you serious?" I said, "Wouldn't that be great? Me, a retired athlete and roadie for a rock band on the cover of Rolling Stone?" Penny's friend said, "Call me when you get the band, and you'll be on it." I was like, Fuck yeah! Well, if being in Rolling Stone could Well, if being in Rolling Stone could make you a rock star, maybe being in Penthouse could make you a sex symbol.

I would take that first.

But there might be people who would say you should have been more cautious and turned down this interview.

[Because] people are going to perceive [me] differently? I say, "Fuck you, hypocrites." You're probably reading that magazine and beating off to the stories in there. Yeah, I dig Penthouse.O+

X-Men Legends 2 (Activision) PS2, Xbox, GC, PC, PSP

Play favorites. Pick four mutants to go up against the madman Apocalypse in this epic story in which the X-Men and the Brotherhood have to join forces and fight together.

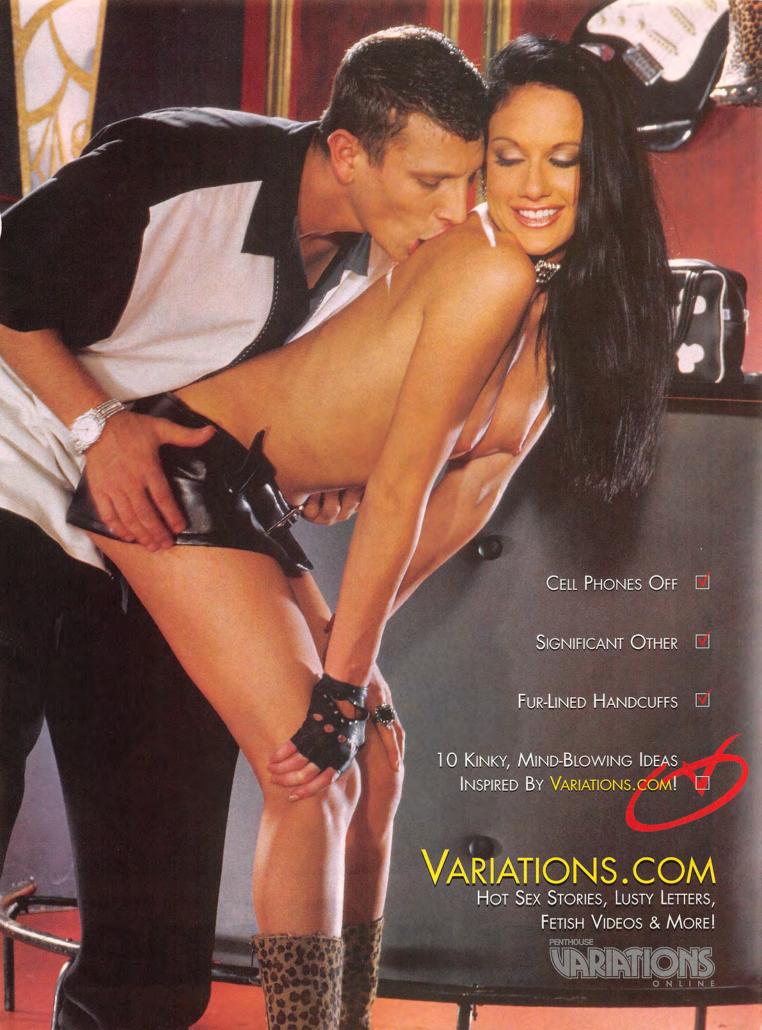

X-FACTOR: The first Legends was cool, but with twice the superpowers and customizations, this sequel should rock even harder.

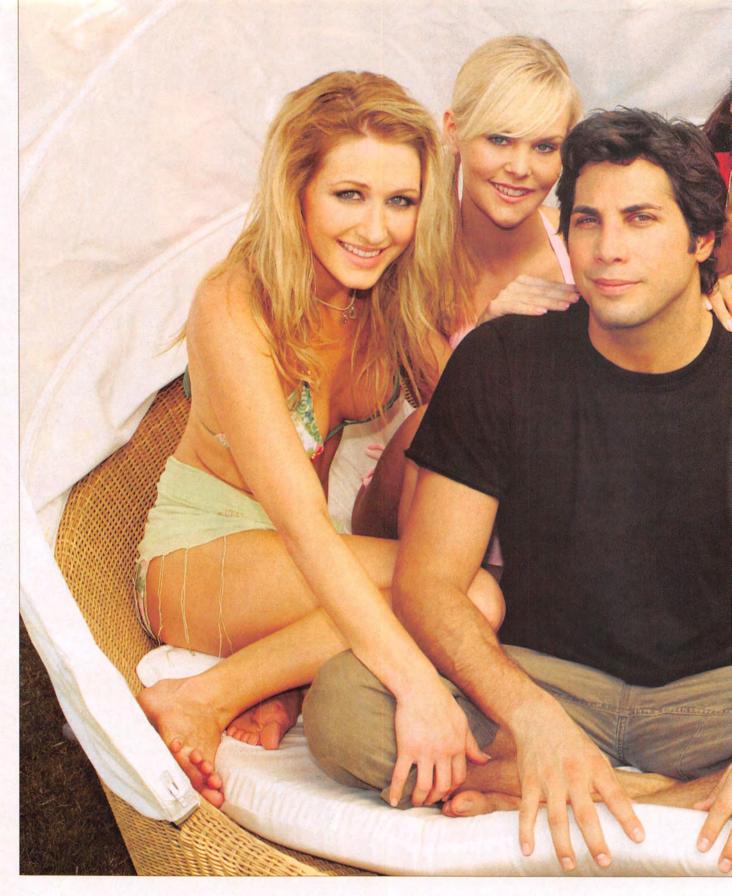

MARVEL NEMESIS: RISE OF THE IMPERFECTS (EA) PS2, Xbox, GC, PSP, DS

In this traditional fighter, face off against Marvel characters from The Imperfects series, plus new ones EA has created for the game.

66GIRS GOILE VILLE VILLE

Joe Francis is only 31 years old and owns a Ferrari and two private jets. He hangs with rap music stars and resides in the Hollywood Hills among the likes of Steven Spielberg and Tom Hanks. Oh, and another thing: Francis has probably seen more tits and ass than anyone else in the world. Chauncé Hayden finds out what it's like to turn spring break into a multimillion-dollar empire.

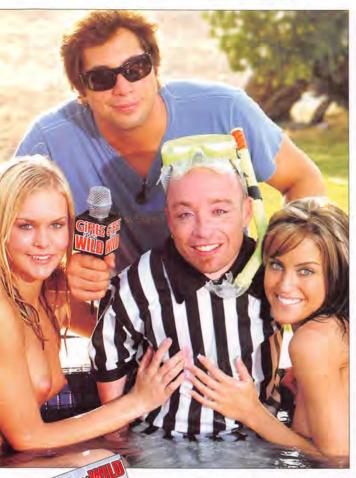

As controversial as he is rich, Joe Francis is the brain behind those titillating late-night infomercials on E! Entertainment Television that feature girls lifting up their shirts and pulling down their pants with pixels masking their private parts. No, they aren't actresses or porn stars. They're just girls having a good time ... a very good time.

Since he was 24, Francis—with a small team of lucky cameramen in tow—has stalked his naked young prey wherever they can be found, from spring-break hot spots to Mardi Gras in New Orleans. The girls featured in Francis's videos live up to the series' name, performing everything from sexy stripteases to full-blown lesbian encounters. For their displays of sexual bravado, the seemingly neverending supply of bare-chested coeds are awarded free Girls Gone Wild T-shirts. But Francis admits that a $100 bill seems to go a long way in encouraging inhibition-free performances.

To date, there are more than 100 GGW titles. Much like the brand name itself, the names don't leave much room for ambiguity: Girls Gone Wild: Beach Babes, Girls Gone Wild: Mardi Gras, Girls Gone Wild: Girls Who Like Girls, Girls Gone Wild: Spring Break 2K4, Girls Gone Wild: Ultimate Spring Break, Girls Gone Wild: Forbidden Spring Break, Girls Gone Wild: Endless Spring Break. Well, you get the idea.

Though buyers of Girls Gone Wild are mostly college-age men, the booze-fueled, crazed party image the videos project has reached well beyond this demographic. Stars like Brad Pitt, Justin Timberlake, and Ashton Kutcher have been photographed wearing Girls Gone Wild trucker hats; television shows like Curb Your Enthusiasm have written the videos into their story lines; and former presidential candidate John Kerry has jokingly proposed the release of a Kerry Gone Wild video.

"I find it interesting when we start filming a girl we don't think is going to do anything, and five minutes later she's eating out her best friend."

"I think every girl knows going in what she's getting involved with": Francis parties with Girls Gone Wild contestants and referee Jon Simanton

This year, after seven years of building his soft-porn empire into a $100 million-a-year business, Francis is embarking on projects and licensing deals to slap the Girls Gone Wild name on restaurants, clothes, music, and even films.

I just finished watching one of your newest DVDs, Daddy's Little Girls.

What did you think?

Well, on the arousal meter, my anatomy gave it a ten.

It's a great show, huh? Did you watch Half-Time Games?

No. Only because it took me about two weeks to get to the end of Daddy's Little Girl, if you get my drift.

[Laughs]

Would you agree that your Girls Gone Wild videos have gotten much more sexual over the years?

Yep! We're way more hard-core. Our customers wanted more, so we gave them more.

How far are you willing to go before, for all intents and purposes, you're making hardcore porn?

We still cut out the sex. We don't show sex. That's where we draw the line, and that's it. We do girl/girl now, and we do individual girls playing with themselves. But that's it.

How tempting is it to cross that line into the adult-film

We've had a tremendous demand to do sex, and a lot of sex is presented to us on camera. but we've cut it all out.

So there's no temptation to show the hard-core sex, knowing that it will certainly bring in millions of dollars in additional revenue?

Nope. It's not what the Girls Gone Wild brand is about.

So you wouldn't call what you do pornography?

No. I call it adult entertainment. What's the difference between what you do and what a company like Vivid Video does?

[Long pause] I just don't see it as the same thing. What we do is nudity and girl/girl. I think pornography is sex. I think you have to have sex to have pornography.

Here's the million-dollar question: Aside from large quantities of alcohol, what is it that makes the girls go wild?

Bad relationships with their fathers. [Laughs] I'm kidding! Who knows? Look, inherently girls want attention. Girls love attention. That's why girls do what they do on camera. They want the attention. They want to be famous.

There's got to be more to it than that.

I also give them Girls Gone Wild

If that's all you need, I'd like to order a couple dozen of those T-shirts.

[Laughs] I'll send you a bunch and you can try! See if it works.

Don't you agree that when a stunning young girl sees the lights of a camera, her inhibition usually disappears until the lights of the camera are turned off?

Absolutely! One hundred percent! The camera adds so much to what we're trying to do. Any camera has an impact. I've seen people turn on their home movie cameras and the girls go crazy.

Are the girls you videotape really acting as spontaneous as it appears, or is there some coaching from the sidelines?

Most of it is spontaneous. However, some of the scenes have a lot of legal issues, so they have to be cut out. That slows down the spontaneity. But overall, it's very spontaneous.

How does one get a job as an editor or cameraman for your company? I would assume it's got to be one of the world's most sought-after positions.

They love it! They love their jobs! Although it's pretty hard to be an editor. I don't know if you noticed, but if you've seen Girls Gone Wild in the past, you haven't seen Girls Gone Wild. Because now it's harder-core, which you commented on earlier, and it's also better. I don't know if you noticed or not, but there's more of a story line to it now.

One thing I did notice is that the new videos don't have much downtime between the nudity. I think you'll agree that in the past, there was more begging the girls to get nude than there is now.

Yeah! In the past it would get boring at times, I agree with you. I felt the same way. That's a really good evaluation. Now it doesn't get boring.

You mentioned that a lot of what's filmed ends up on the editing-room floor because it crosses the line. Can you describe some of the things I'll never get to see?

Every time I think I saw the most shocking thing, something else comes up the very next minute that shocks me even more. Actually, I don't even get that shocked anymore, to tell you the truth. It's all interesting to me, but not really shocking.

I find it interesting when we start filming a girl who we don't think is going to do anything, and five minutes later she's eating out her friend or her best friend-or even her sister!

Does your reputation and the brand you've created make it easier or more difficult to attract women who are willing to show it all on camera?

Because?

Because as a girl, you know exactly what you're getting into. You're either going to do it or you're not. The decision has already been made. So you're going to get very few girls who are going to get talked into something they wouldn't have normally done, or something they didn't really want to do. Whereas when Girls Gone Wild wasn't known, everybody had to basically be talked into doing it. But these days, the girls know exactly what we are and exactly what they're doing. In that respect it may be a little bit harder, and we may get a different type of girl every once in a while. Do you coach the girls?

What do you mean by "coach"? Meaning, do you provide the girls with a script to read or tell them what you'd like them to say so they come across in a way that's conducive to the Girls Gone Wild brand?

No, no, no, no! That's why we let the seaments run so long. We want people to see that the girls aren't coached.

I have to imagine there are porn-star wannabes who would love to use Girls Gone Wild as a way of gaining some free publicity. Do you accept the pros, so to speak? We definitely get those girls, one hundred percent! But I don't like to waste all of our time on them, because sometimes the girls seeking us out aren't what I view as Girls Gone Wild girls.

What exactly is a Girls Gone Wild girl?

A young, innocent, fresh girl who is not a hard-core type of girl. It's the antithesis of the porn-star type of girl.

You're a god to male college students. But I'm sure to a large group of women, you're considered a bastard.

[Laughs]

You don't seem shocked. Would I be wrong if I described you as a male chauvinist pig?

No way. I love women. I have three sisters. I don't feel I'm exploiting women in any way. I'm just giving them a medium to expose themselves.

How do your sisters feel about Girls Gone Wild?

They like it. Nobody in my family has a problem with it. My family is pretty liberal. Nobody has a problem with what I do.

Have you ever paid the girls who appear on your DVDs?

Ninety to 95 percent of the girls aren't paid.

So some girls do get paid to do outrageous things?

Sometimes there are situations where the girl wants a hundred bucks or very little money. So we'll give them very little money.

That's a good segue to my next question. If I described you as a billionaire, would I be wrong?

Not even close.

How far off am I?

I never disclose numbers. But I'll tell you that everything I ever read is wrong. I've never heard anything that was right. It's all bullshit that's out there.

Let's talk about your lifestyle. The last I heard, and correct me if I'm wrong, is that you own two Gulfstream jets.

I have two planes. One's a Gulfstream, the other is a Falcon.

Aren't you concerned that the pilots' full attention might not be on flying?

No, not at all. The cockpit door is always closed and my pilots are responsible guys. They never get involved with the

Is it impossible for a normal guy to get on the plane?

Not at all. Anybody who works with us, it's theirs. Any of the guys who support us or endorse the product that we're in business with, I'll let them fly wherever they want.

For the record, I endorse your product and I consider this interview working for you.

[Laughs] Great! You're in! All kidding aside, didn't Tom Hanks's son Colin almost die

No. You know in the beginning of every flight, they tell you that oxygen-mask story? Well, they tell you that because one of the most common things that happens on a plane is when the cabin loses pressurization. Anyway, Ashton Kutcher, Danny Masterson, Colin Hanks, Wilmer Valderrama, and a bunch of other people were on the plane that day. And all I can tell you is that all of the safety features on the plane worked perfectly. When we lost cabin pressure. all of the oxygen masks came down and the oxygen flowed, as it should.

But Colin Hanks didn't pull his oxygen mask all the way down. So the pin didn't come out, and he passed out.

I would think one of the last things in the world you want is for the son of Tom Hanks to pass out on your jet due to lack of oxygen.

Yeah, but once the plane dropped down in altitude, he was fine.

Those are some pretty big names you just tossed around. My guess is you're a pretty popular guy with a lot of the young Hollywood crowd.

I'm friends with all of them. [Laughs] But I think they all love the girls more than me!

These stars don't need Joe Francis to attract wild girls. If anything, I would think they would be nervous they might get in trouble hanging around with you.

The biggest stars—I won't even mention the freakin' names to you-but the biggest stars you can imagine call me all the time. I'm talking about Academy Award winners.

Brad Pitt has been photographed wearing your Tshirts and hats.

Yeah, but I'll never mention anybody's name.

I read that Jennifer Aniston actually bought Brad his first Girls Gone Wild video. I wonder if somehow you're to blame for their divorce.

[Laughs] I heard that. But all I'll say about it is that Jennifer definitely buys my videos.

Could you possibly get a better endorsement than to have Brad Pitt wearing Girls Gone Wild hats and T-shirts?

Um ... no.

Another big star who's been seen wearing your gear is Justin Timberlake. But I wonder if Cameron Diaz is willing to hop on board the Girls Gone Wild express.

[Long pause] Look, every time somebody gets a girlfriend, they're out of the scene. Ashton has Demi now, so he's not out there in the scene anymore.

Is the Girls Gone Wild scene for single guys only?

Single guys or really clever married guys.

Are you single? Yeah.

Have you ever had a girlfriend since you've been doing this? Yeah. I've had a few here and there Should anyone be surprised that none of those relationships worked out?

It's not impossible for me to maintain a relationship. But there needs to be a little bit of leeway. I need a little bit of play room. I think every girl knows going in what she's getting involved with.

Yeah, a guy with a shitload of money and a Gulfstream jet.

[Laughs] That's why they have to give me a little more leeway! It's a good deal for them.

It must be nice being able to fly around the world in your own personal Girls Gone Wild jet. Do you understand how most of us could not begin to relate to your lifestyle?

You know, at the end of the day, it's still work. It's like anything. You know how excited you are when you get a new car? Well, that feeling wears off after a

Are you trying to convince me that the excitement from the money, mansions, women, and jets all wears off? Are you really that jaded?

I'm not going to say you get jaded. I'm just going to say that you get used to it.

At 31 years old, you're still just a kid. Not bad for someone who started with some unused file footage and a video camera.

I worked my ass off to get here. I feel like I earned everything I got. Worked your ass off? You hold a video camera and point it at naked girls. Where's the hard work?

It's the old saying: "I wish I had thought of that." It's like walking up to Tiger Woods and saying, "I wish I had taken golf lessons." Know what I mean? Come on. Why is there only one Tiger Woods? Why is there only one Joe Francis? If it were that easy, everyone would be able to duplicate it. How come nobody has?

Are you surprised—

[Interrupts] Right? Do you

I certainly agree that nothing is ever as easy as it appears. What I was going to ask is, why do you think nobody can do what you do and be as successful as you've been?

[Yells] You can't! Because it's fucking harder than you think! Don't you think people have tried? People have tried and tried. Everybody has tried. I'm sure you've heard bar conversations of people saying, "I'm going to try that!" And they do

Does it surprise you that nobody thought of videotaping the girl next door getting wild and naked before you came up with the idea?

Am I surprised? I'm surprised that nobody ever went out and filmed real girls. Which is our concept. Our concept is that we just film real, everyday girls. But it's a function of timing and the camera becoming available and inexpensive.

Do you recall what you were doing the first time you thought of the idea?

I had seen some footage on other videos I was working on that was very similar to what would become Girls Gone Wild. This footage struck a chord with me because I had never seen anything like it before. I thought for sure somebody else must have thought of this already. So I went to every video store and checked all over the Internet and couldn't find anything like it. What made it interesting to me was that it wasn't pornography and these girls weren't paid actors. The whole idea just drew me in deeper and deeper. Was it difficult to get regular

Was it difficult to get regular girls to take their tops off that first year?

Absolutely! It was hard for a couple of years. It was difficult because Girls Gone Wild wasn't a known brand. These days, if you expose yourself to Girls Gone Wild, you know 100 percent what you're getting into. Everyone knows what we do and who we are. Before, you had to explain it to the girls. In the beginning, girls weren't really sure if they wanted to do it, but now girls are fighting to do it. As a 24-year-old with a camera and a dream. I'm sure you would have made Donald Trump proud. Did it take a lot of money to get started?

I already had money from a previous venture called Banned From Television. That was my first video.

Is it legal to actually point a camera at a topless girl and turn it into a video? Or do you have to get the girl to give you permission?

We don't need permission, but we do it anyway just for precautionary measures.

True or false: You have the biggest house per square foot in Los Angeles.

No, no. Not true.

Describe your house.

I have a lovely house.

With a butler, I would assume? I have a staff of 15, actually.

That's remarkable.

I have two homes. My Mexico compound is 40,000 square feet.

I'm trying to picture a 40,000square-foot compound. No offense, but I'm leaning toward billionaire again. Isn't it also true that you have your own Girls Gone Wild island retreat?

Yes

Where is it?

Let's just say the Girls Gone Wild island is located in one of the most beautiful and tropical locations in the world. If I told you where it was, every guy in America would be trying to storm the beaches in search of these hot young girls. I like my odds better this way.

How would a regular guy get to visit?

Throughout the next year, we'll be offering some lucky Girls Gone Wild fans the chance to travel to the island with me.

This may sound like a dumb question, but are there wild girls on the island 24/7?

As long as I'm there, hot girls are there.

Over the years, you've hired several celebrities to be hosts for your videos. The list includes Snoop Dogg, Eminem, and comedian Doug Stanhope. Why do you need them?

I think the celebrity hosts add a certain element to the product. But I don't think I need them anymore. However, in the beginning I did to give some credibility. But I think by now, everyone knows Girls Gone Wild. And I think Girls Gone Wild is bigger than any celebrity we could put in there now.

Do you ever get tired of looking at tits and pussy?

No, never. That's like asking me if I ever get sick of eating.

Earlier you said that everything gets old, just like when you get excited over a new car. Naked girls don't fall into that category?

It only gets old when you're full. Eating gets old when you just went to a buffet in Vegas. But after an hour, you're hungry again! Sex is like eating. Looking at tits is like eating.

Never gets old? Nope.

Ever worry that one day you'll have a daughter and she'll end up drunk and nude in front of some guy's camera?

I hope I have daughters one day, because I love girls a lot. And, um ... no. But if she wants to do it, she wants to do it. I'm not going to control everybody's life.

Is it true there are plans for a Girls Gone Wild theme restaurant?

Yeah. We're looking at more of a bar environment than a restaurant. But yeah, I want to put those all over the country.

If you could change something about your life, what would it be?

Very good question. [Laughs] I think I would work less! People don't realize that I'm working all the time.

Is it also true there's going to be a Girls Gone Wild feature film?

Yes, there is! I don't know much about it except to say that, yes, there will be a feature film. But it's not financed yet. So I can't talk about the whole deal. But yes, there will be a feature film.

Will there ever be a celebrity version of Girls Gone Wild?

There probably will be in a few years after some of these girls become famous and we rerelease the tapes.

How would you like to be remembered?

As a man who lived every single minute of his life like it was his last minute.

If there's a heaven and a hell, which will you be checking into?

Talk Dirty to C

When it comes to sex, one thing is clear: Women love to talk about it almost as much as we love to do it. For single girls, there's nothing more satisfying (aside from the sex itself) than dishing to friends about exactly what went down between you and your latest lover. After we have a fling, the first thing our friends want to know is "How was it?" And believe me, they won't take "good" for an answer-they want all the naughty details.

Talking about sex is a way of living vicariously through one another, and can be a bonding experience. Every time I try something new—whether it's sex in public, an unexpected hookup, getting a lap dance, or having a threesome—I can't wait to tell my best friends all about it.

"Every time I try something new—an unexpected hookup, getting a lap dance, or having a threesome—I can't wait to tell my best friends all about it."

LETTING IT ALL OUT

Sometimes there are things that are too intimate to explore, even with your closest confidantes. When I had a one-night stand with a guy many of my friends think is hot, they wanted to know everything, but I got a little shy. I outlined only the details of our brief but intense hookup. The truth was, there were some things I couldn't even tell the guy. I made him guess: As he had me over his lap, he tapped my pussy, and I practically melted. "You like that, don't you?" he asked. "You like to have your pussy spanked?" All I could do was nod, my face probably flushed red in the darkness as he figured out the secret I was too embarrassed to utter aloud. Sometimes having a sexual secret that feels taboo can be a turn-on in and of itself.

TALK DIRTY TO ME Most girls love sharing their fantasies—with our friends and lovers. Talking during sex is a surefire way to get me off. I once had a lover spin an elaborate tale about the party we were to attend later that night. In the middle of spanking me, he murmured in my ear, "Tonight I'm going to throw you across my lap, just like this, and let any guy there spank you. Maybe I'll even let them take turns fucking you while I hold you down, and there won't be a thing you can do about it." Every word out of his mouth made me wetter and wetter. His tone was so hushed and intimate as he whispered the most depraved things he could think of: "I'll even take pictures of you while these strangers have their fill, so we'll both have proof of what a dirty girl you really are." Did anything like that actually happen? No. Nor would I have wanted it to. But when he pinned me against the wall and repeated it at the crowded party, I couldn't wait to be alone with him again.

My No.1 turn-on is hearing someone else's fantasyespecially from a lover or someone I'm attracted to. It's not necessarily about making the fantasy come true. Just hearing it spoken can get me excited. Once a guy gave me a birthday present: his ass. "I want you to take my ass, for the very first time," he whispered. Hearing this big macho guy suddenly become almost shy not only turned me on, but made me appreciate his vulnerability. It was a magic, erotic key that he shared with me.

When I'm able to truly let myself go, I ask lovers to call me names like slut and whore to demean me. Or I can be the top, relishing the power I have over a guy who's offered his body to me. Even a simple sentence like "Get on your hands and knees," uttered with the perfect snarl, can get my heart (and his) racing. Sometimes we don't fully let ourselves go with guys, afraid they might laugh at or look down on us-which may be why we can truly bare all to our girlfriends, letting no spanking or tryst go untold.O+ B

Watch, Learn, and Enjoy

Statistics show that men masturbate more often and with less guilt than women, but females are catching up. Guys can now see for themselves how women do it in the just-released DVD Orgasmic Women: 13 Selfloving Divas, produced by the "Mother of Masturbation" Betty Dodson and Libido films. It shows upclose and enthusiastic demonstrations of masturbation by women of all backgrounds. Guys I showed the DVD to enjoyed the visuals more than reading a book on the subject. like Dodson's Sex for One, while bemoaning the fact that most women are more modest than these ladies. Most impressive, even to a veteran sex therapist like myself, are the "eclectic" methods that go beyond aiming water hoses at the vagina, humping furniture, or rubbing soft blankets between the legs. The women show and tell about multiple stimulators and other implements. As expected, some male viewers felt intimidated when they heard 21-year-old Ramona say, "I would never just have partner sex without personal masturbation." But guys can be heartened that such proud masturbation exhibitionists as Joan say that solo pleasure is not as important as partner sex, that self-love is preparation for partnership, and-even better-that mutual masturbation is. according to Ramona, "super hot." Check out BettyDodson.com, and watch and learn: Women have better orgasms when you add clitoral stimulation-and your presenceto penetration.

cofounder of the line, sexologist Candida Royalle. The colorful and sleek wands do double duty: fitting the shape and curve of the G spot area and stimulating the surrounding muscle groups. The ergonomic design makes sense, given that creator Jandirk Groet's credits include Nordica ski boots, compact cameras, and aircraft cockpits. Liberté looks so much like a Swedish gadget that you can put it on your coffee table to stimulate interesting conversation—and possibly an intimate try-outwith a date. Be mature: Stop perceiving a vibrator as a mechanical competitor or a substitute for your ing before sex with a partner can have negative consequences. As Steve asked, "Won't I use it up, and worse yet, be bored on my date since I won't be looking forward to sex?" My advice: Self-pleasure can be a great way to relieve pre-sex pressure when you're on a date, allowing you to enjoy the relationship more, which is exactly what women want. Solo sexual activity beforehand can even boost your mood (from chemical rushes) and desire. Fantasize about her while masturbating. No need for physiological worry either, since the refractory period-when ejaculate builds up "Guys can be heartened that such proud masturbation exhibitionists as Joan say that solo pleasure is enjoyable but not as important as partner sex."

NEW ON THE MARKET

In Dodson's DVD, the masturbation divas use a wide variety of dildos (for insertion) and vibrators (for external stimulation) for added pleasure. Options range from the small Pocket Rocket that easily slips between lovers' bodies to more cumbersome body massagers with bulbous vibrating heads. Made of steel or silicone, dildos can vibrate or have extensions (some are whimsically shaped like a rabbit or bear) for clitoral stimulation. The latest model on the market is Liberté, appropriately named since "it is meant to unleash a woman's freedom and liberty to enjoy herself," says penis, but as an added pleasure tool. And get used to it, since a study revealed that nearly half of women ages 18 to 55 have used one. Find out her preferences and buy one-for both of you (my favorite tip). That way you'll reduce your level of intimidation, and add to your own pleasure and fun. Since the original vibrator was marketed as a "body massager," use it to arouse parts other than the genitals for overall pleasure, which is the goal of good sex anyway.

SELF-LOVE, BETTER LOVE

One of the most troubling concerns men have is whether or not masturbat-again—need only be 20 minutes. Another man's related question to me: Will he use up his sperm and become infertile? Note Martha Cornog's report in The Bia Book of Masturbation that if you ejaculate on your own, then have sex with a partner within 72 hours, your sperm count can be reduced. But don't panic. British sex researchers have shown that women physiologically adjust to retain sperm. And there are biological advantages to masturbating in between sex with a partner: getting rid of any slacker sperm, making way for a fresh, healthier supply.Ot a

Feeling Cool, Looking Tough

Riding a motorcycle requires the right equipment, and we're not talking about just the machine between your legs. While some idiots jump on their bikes in shorts and flip-flops, anybody with a clue knows the right apparel can keep you comfortable, shield you from the elements, and protect your personal real estate in the event of a get-off. From helmets to boots and everything in between, here is some of the hottest new gear in motofashion.

Harley-Davidson

The Motor Company not only makes bikes that define the class, it also outfits your person with threads to fit your Fat Boy. Two favorites are the FXRG midweight leather jacket for men (left), $595, and the Spirited leather jacket for women (right), $390. Both are loaded with features and armed with style, in the fashion that has made the brand famous, Harley-Davidson.com

A lot of riders aren't into boots, but they know their Nike Turbo 3000s aren't really built for motorcycle duty. Set Up Urban boots (left) look like a pair of slick lace-up sneakers, but they offer stout construction and internal ankle protection. Generous ventilation and Flex panels ensure a comfortable fit. $74.99. Motonation.com

Cold, wet feet can ruin your day, especially if you're a hard-core road-muncher with miles to go before you can sleep. Alpinestars Effex GTX boots (right) have waterproof leather uppers to keep them dry, Gore-Tex lining to keep them toasty, and high-tech armor to protect your ankles. Upper-calf Velcro closures keep you snug and secure. $219.95. Alpinestars.com

Those Brits have always had a certain understated style, and the Triumph Cafe Racer jacket (left) reflects that unique kind of cool. Hidden ventilation panels within pockets and removable body armor round out this great riding gear. $390. Triumph.co.uk/usa

How much would you pay for a sharp leather jacket that has lightweight body armor, full ventilation, a zip-in liner for cold weather, and stretch panels for complete flexibility? Cortech's feature-laden Impulse jacket (right) is only $289.99, and it comes in sizes for men and women. TourMaster.com

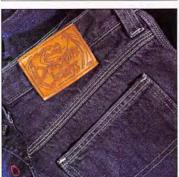

Joe Rocket

Joe Rocket's Speedmaster jacket (left) is loaded with external padding and internal dual-density armor. Rocket's Variable Flow ventilation system keeps you from sizzling in hot weather. A removable insulated vest helps you stay cozy when it's cold out. $449.95. JoeRocket.com

Aerostich

The Aerostich Roadcrafter riding suit (right) features heavy Cordura nylon construction and high-tech armor, but, best of all, it's designed to fit over your tux so you can peel out of it James Bond-style. Both one- and two-piece versions are available. Prices start at $727. Aerostich.com

Arai

Stylish, aerodynamic, and sporting the latest in protection technology, the Arai Quantum-2 full-face helmet (left) is heavy on features and light in weight. It's available in a wide range of graphics and sizes, and prices start at $497.95. AraiAmericas.com

Suomy

Suomy's Nomad helmet (right) is an engineering marvel. Using the latest in lightweight construction techniques, and equipped with adjustable vents and a full-perimeter face shield, the Nomad is a classic open-face model sweetened with the best of today's technology. $249. Suomy-USA.com

Roadgear

Gloves are critical year-round because your hands can sustain serious damage from the most minor incident. Roadgear's Boss gloves (left) have hybrid leather/Cordura nylon construction that protects and a breathable Hipora liner that keeps them waterproof. $85.90. Roadgear.com

■ TourMaster

TourMaster's Winter Elite gloves (right) are sheathed in both sheep and goatskin and have 3M Thinsulate insulation for warmth. A waterproof lining prevents your digits from freezing to the handlebars. $89.99. TourMaster.com

Fast Company

You love your jeans, but they're not much of a buffer against road rash. Draggin' Jeans (left) are reinforced through the miracle of Kevlar, yet feel and wash like regular blue jeans. $89.95. Optional body armor is available. DragginJeans.com

Shoei

Can't make up your mind between a full-face or an open-face helmet? The Shoei Syncrotec (right) offers the best of both with a slick, flip-up face cover and shield. The helmet comes in solid and metallic colors, and costs between $452.99 and $465.99. Shoei-Helmets.com

Hein Gericke

Want to stay cool? The Carson leather jacket (left) has a special treatment that reflects sunlight to keep you comfortable. Huge front-storage pockets double as vents, and there's an integrated kidney belt and pockets for optional body armor. $449.95. HeinGericke-USA.com

Spidi

Spidi's Ergo jacket (right) boasts a complex combination of multiple layers that interchange to meet your needs of the day. Extensive armor, waterproof pockets, and sizes up to 6XL make this an amazing "system." Prices start at $499. Spidi.com

CHEATERSWIN!

No pain, no gain? No thank you. You can actually cut down on your gym time and still reap the benefits of a long and grueling workout—if you know how to beat the system.

You know that guy who spends an hour on the weight machines before heading off to spin class? You may be tempted to admire his discipline, but don't bother. A short workout program might be just as effective as a sweat-your-ass-off regimen. Scientists at the University of Glamorgan in South Wales assigned two groups to different weight-training regimens. The first did one set of eight upper-body repetitions three times a week; the second did three sets of eight reps three times a week.

The result? After two months, both groups of gut-busters had equal amounts of muscle increase and body-fat decrease. This is the latest in a slew of studies proving that shorter bursts of activity can be just as effective as prolonged exercise. For those looking to decrease sweat time, thereby increasing their watching-basic-cable-while-eating-potato-chips time, take note of the following expert-recommended time-savers.

Switch it up. Interval training allows you to get the same effect from a 15-minute run as you would from a half-hour jog. Instead of plodding along at the same speed, alternate 30-second sprints with a 30-second jogging lap.

Multitask. Trainer to the stars Matt Roberts recommends shortened lifting jaunts of about 20 minutes. The key is switching between lower- and upper-body regimens during what would normally be your downtime; while you're resting your quads, hit the shoulder press. This will give you the same beefy biceps as that ponytailed guy who seems to live by the free weights.

Tired of wasting hours on the treadmill? Finish your workout in a hurry with these sneaky time-savers.

Plan ahead. Hmmm, maybe some squats ... or some crunches with the medicine ball. No, wait, the dip station is open! Sound familiar? Before you get to the gym, decide which muscle groups you need to work that session and which machines you want to use.

Be flexible with your plan. Okay, so you always work your pecs before your calves. But if some meathead is monopolizing the bench, head to the calf press and come back later. Waiting around won't burn calories.

Simplify. Got a membership to a pricey palladium that's laden with TVs, magazines, and babes on bikes? Then you're doing more looking than lifting. Switch to a bare-bones gvm that offers pump without perks, and you'll be more likely to finish your workout in a hurry.

Stay home. If your gym is a fiveminute drive from your house, you can save ten minutes by jogging around your neighborhood instead of going. Tack those ten minutes on to your run, and you'll burn an extra 120 calories.

Classic workouts never die-they just collect dust in PE class where you left them. To wit: the peg board, otherwise known as the scourge of spindly armed sixthgraders the world over. What was once the reason you counterfeited excuse letters can now provide the kind of pythons normally reserved for rock climbers and suspended ballplayers.

Those wooden hat racks of yesteryear are a distant memory in this world of foamy climbing walls that litter sports and that's a shame, because peg pards offer a much better workout.

The climbing wall is more strategy than building actual strength," says Manhattan fitness trainer and plastic surgeon Dr. Bruce Nadler. "The majority of it is just using your feet to find a toehold, with the hand really just steadying you."

But the peg board, Nadler maintains. is as good an upper-body workout as you're going to get. And let's face it, you can't pretend you're a monkey when you're bench-pressing.

"The big advantage with the board is that you're using both concentric strength—shortening the muscles as you climb the wall—and then exocentric strength as your muscles lengthen when you descend. With climbing walls. you climb up, but you're just rappelling Nadler's quick to add that the vertical ascent-rather than the stair-like horizontal climb—gets the best results. Changing the distances between pegs (placing some close together and others farther apart, requiring more of a swing motion) also gives you more buff for your buck.

Should you actually locate and use this ancient wonder of the adolescent world, you'll notice immediate changes in your biceps, grip, back, and overall coordination. Just why did this little gym dandy up and disappear?

"Like everything else, they've fallen victim to liability issues," says Nadler. "Peg boards are a great strength and aerobic workout, but by today's standards, they're too dangerous."

HEALTH NEWS SALT IS NOT

Sick of eating fried foods without your old pal Mr. Salt? There's a chance you two may reconcile. Albert Einstein College of Medicine recently finished a 13-year study of 7,278 men and women and found that those who consumed less than the daily recommendation of one teaspoon of salt had a higher rate of heart disease. In fact, cardiovascular mortality rose one percent for every 1,000-mg reduction in sodium.

But don't supersize those fries just yet. Dr. David Katz, the director of Yale's Prevention Research Center, reasons that someone who is limiting his salt intake probably wasn't a beacon of health to begin with. "I suspect the sickest people have the highest mortality rate," says Katz.

He may have said something else, but we were too busy sprinkling our Tater Tots with salty goodness to listen.

A PILL TO FULFILL

Attention, two-pump chumps: Your days of disappointing legions of dildo-devotees are almost over.
Our pals over at Johnson & Johnson have been conducting highly successful test trials of a new drug for premature ejaculators.
According to data amassed from 2,614 male sufferers who took the dick elixir dapoxetine, average overall tingle time rose from under a minute to a (slightly) more acceptable three minutes. As a result, J&J is seeking permission to sell the drug in the United States.

It should come as no surprise that dapoxetine was originally designed to be an antidepressant. What's more uplifting than not having to memorize a postcoital apology speech?

KIDNEY STONED

Good news for beer lovers everywhere: According to a study by Boston's Brigham and Women's Hospital, a daily glass of giggle juice may actually be good for your kidneys. Guys who consumed around seven drinks per week were 30 percent less likely to have high levels of creatinine in the blood, which indicates kidney dysfunction, compared to their teetotaler counterparts.

"This is the first study to show a consistent reduction in the risk of chronic kidney disease with light to moderate drinking," said Brigham researcher Dr. Tobias Kurth. "This study may be broadening our knowledge of alcohol and disease prevention." Dr. Kurth, you have inspired us to broaden our knowledge of alcohol at a pregame party this weekend.

DON'T FEEL THE BURN

Memo to those of you suffering from nighttime acid reflux: Stop washing down that Valium with decaf Shasta. According to a study by the University of Arizona, sleeping pills and carbonated beverages can exponentially increase your chances of heartburn.

Dr. Ronnie Fass, a professor of medicine who headed the study, claims benzodiazepines found in sedatives like Ativan and Xanax weaken the barrier between the esophagus and stomach. And in related 'flux findings, the acidic nature of soft drinks and beer can raise the risk of heartburn by 31 percent compared to those who abstain from pills and pilsner.

As for some insomnia-busting alternatives? We recommend a glass of warm milk and some quality time at Penthouse.com. What? That's just our completely unbiased opinion!

INTERVIEW BY CHAUNCE HAYDEN PHOTOGRAPHS BY MARK MANN Mazi

NORMALLY, AN INTERVIEW WITH A MASSAGE therapist doesn't make for a very exciting read. But throw in the biggest names in rock 'n' roll, Hollywood stars, and a sexy masseuse who's not afraid to say where her hands have been, and you've got a lifetime supply of celebrity dish.

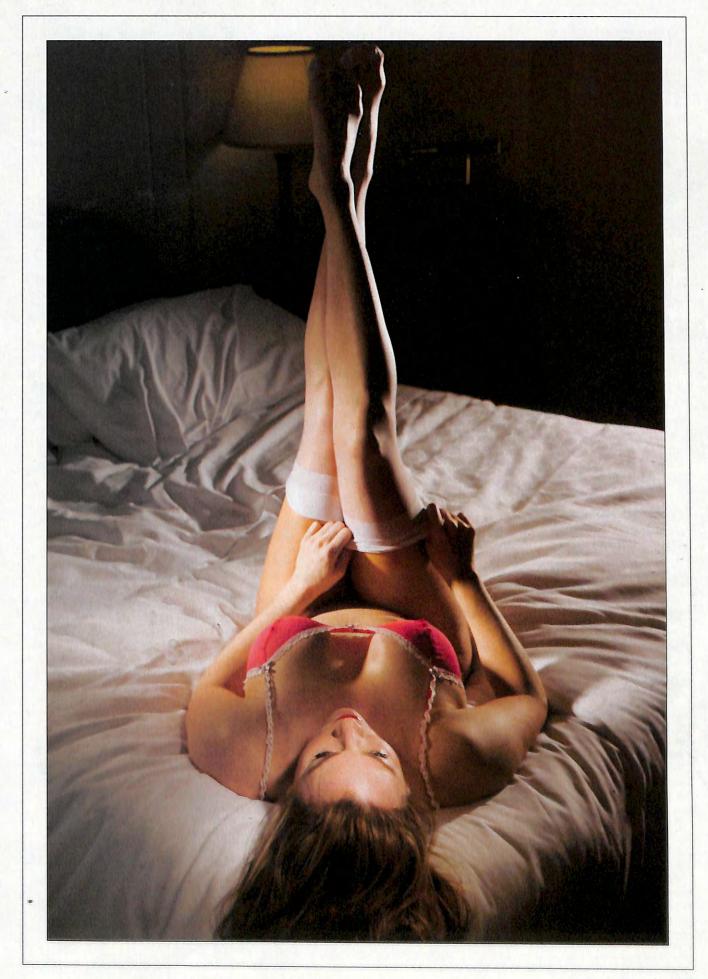

Her name is Dorothy Stein. But to rock stars young and old, she's known simply as Dr. Dot. Stein claims she was given the title by none other than Frank Zappa while touring with his band in 1988. Apparently it stuck, and a legend was born.

Over the years, Dr. Dot has wrapped her hands around some of the hottest stars in the music biz. including Mick Jagger, Sting, Eminem, Sheryl Crow, the Who, David Byrne, Justin Timberlake, Courtney Love, and Gene Simmons. The good doctor's online scrapbook, DrDot.com, boasts a long list of glowing testimonials from her satisfied superstar clients including Led Zeppelin's Robert Plant, who describes her hands as "amazing." And just for the record, Dr. Dot really is a licensed masseuse, even though she didn't start out as one.

But this 35-year-old's early ambition wasn't to give celebrities the best massage of their life. Like any starstruck teenage groupie, Stein set out to find her way backstage at local concerts. Unwilling to provide sexual favors, the then -15-year-old wore makeup, miniskirts, and high heels, and came up with an ingenious proposal that would soon become a career. While waiting outside a Hampton, Virginia. arena before a Def Leppard concert, Stein approached the band's guitarist, Phil Collen, with her "no sex" plan for success. Her unique idea caught the band's interest. Sidestepping a long line of eager groupies, Dr. Dot quickly found herself on the band's tour bus. The rest, as they say, is kneading history.

Born in Manchester, Connecticut, and raised by ultraliberal bohemian parents, Dr. Dot grew up on a daily dose of the Beatles, Rolling Stones, Grateful Dead, and Frank Zappa. By the time she was ten, Dr. Dot had attended more than 20 Dead concerts. Her early exposure to rock 'n' roll, mixed with her burning desire to be in the company of her guitar heroes, sparked an insatiable appetite for unforgettable backstage thrills. Not to mention enough fullfrontal views to last a lifetime.

the hairdresser. Imagine how much they talk when they're naked and relaxed with their legs spread open!"

As one might expect, many of the stars Dr. Dot has massaged, both male and female, have put their moves on the sexy therapist—but she claims to reject their advances. "If I gave them what they want, they'd have no respect for me and never want to see me again," she says.

Besides seeking a six-figure book deal (she plans to publish an English version of a book she had published in Germany, Butt-Naked and Backstage), Dr. Dot is pitching a how-to DVD that includes her infamous "bite method," in which she kneads large chunks of back flesh with her mouth. And when not touring with the Stones or soothing Sting's aching bones, she offers sex and relationship advice.

In rock 'n' roll circles, you've become a living legend. You must give one hell of a massage.

I've been told I give the best massage in the world by hundreds of rock stars. So it must be true.

You call yourself a doctor. Dare I ask what medical school you attended? If you look up the word doctor in the dictionary, it says "to repair something broken or flawed." That's what I do. I fix people. I help them. Actually, I got the name Dr. Dot from Frank Zappa.

Exactly how did you get the name Dr.

I was massaging Frank Zappa's whole band during their 1988 Broadway the Hard Way tour. I would never charge them money. I would massage them all for free. So Frank would always say, "Go get the doctor!" whenever he wanted a massage. That's how I got the name

How many years have you been a rock 'n' roll masseuse?

I've been massaging people since I was five years old. I started by massaging hippie parents. They would just lie around, and I would walk on their backs. My parents were only 17 when they had me during the Summer of Love. But I massaged my first rock star when I was 15.

Who was that?

Def Leppard.

The entire band?

Yeah! My girlfriend wanted to meet them so badly. But we didn't have enough money for tickets. So I decided since I was so good at massage, why not trade a massage instead of a blowjob in order to get into the show for free? That's how it all started.

Would you consider yourself a groupie?

It depends on what your definition of groupie is. If your definition of a groupie is someone who loves music, [yells] then call me a fucking groupie! But if your definition of a groupie is someone who just fucks rock stars for the hell of it, then I'm not a groupie. I don't need to do that. In fact, if you do fuck a rock star, you'll probably never see them again, because they want a different girl every day.

Did you see the film Almost Famous? I saw it many times.

Would it be fair to say your life is similar to that of Kate Hudson's character?

Not really. I thought it was a very G-rated version of the real story. There's a lot more shit going on than that on tour. But it's true: Rock stars will just throw you away like in the movie. I saw that kind of behavior all the time. They always make fun of the groupies on the bus. You'll hear things like, "Hey, did you see that girl with the backstage pass with the letter B on it?"

What does the letter B on a backstage pass mean?

It means she's already blown somebody and the band won't have her. The roadies will put a little letter B on the backstage pass if a groupie gave them a blowjob. That's a standard code to let the band know she blew someone to get backstage. See, the crew never gets laid unless they have a certain number of backstage passes to give away. So they use them to get as much trim as they can. But they'll always let the band know by putting little symbols on the pass what the girl did to get backstage. Once you're marked, the band will have nothing to do with you. I promised that would never happen to me. I was only 15 when I found that out. I learned really, really fast.

Just out of curiosity, how old were you when you lost your virginity?

I was between 14 and 15. But I gave my first blowjob when I was in the seventh grade. I love sex! Period!

You're currently shopping around a book. Should certain rock stars be nervous about it?

Well, if they acted badly, then maybe they should be nervous. But I don't want to come across as Heidi Fleiss. It's my life story. It's a diary of my life. I always kept track of everything that was going on. When I massage a band, I remember everything that happened. But I would never bite the hand that feeds me. I'm not that stupid.

I would think that most rock stars want more than just a therapeutic rubdown. How often do you get hit on for something more?

A lot. A very big rap star wanted more than just a massage, but I'm not telling you his name because I don't want to end up on the wrong end of a drive-by shooting!

We don't want that to happen to us either, so I'll move on. So everyone is naked when you massage them?

That said, you've probably seen just about every rock 'n' roll penis there

Yeah. It's true. That's why nothing shocks me anymore.

Who has the biggest penis?

It's hard to say. It's close between Tommy Lee and the singer of the Romantics—Wally Palmar—believe it or Wally Palmar?

I can't believe I remember his fucking name. He had the hugest dick I ever

What can you tell us about Mick Jagger?

I can tell you that I had a huge fight with him once, and we're still friends.

What did you and Mick fight about? He screamed at me backstage once because I was putting up Dr. Dot fliers on the wall. The crew loved it, but Mick thought I was getting too much attention and flew into a rage. He ripped all the fliers down off the wall and got rid of the massage room.

Did you yell back?

No! Are you crazy? I put my tail between my leas and whimpered off.

You've also massaged Courtney Love, Is she as unstable as the press makes her out to be?

Talk about crazy! You might think it's an act with her, but it's not an act! She's exactly how she appears. I think she's freaked out by fame. A lot of people who feel that they don't deserve it freak out when they finally get it.

In the past, Courtney hasn't been shy when it comes to talking about her love affairs with other rock stars. Did

Hill. Hands down.

Worst body?

I won't answer that question. Never! That's the most evil taboo in the world.

Are you into chicks as much as you're into men?

Yeah. If Angelina Jolie even looked at me the wrong way, it would be all over! Do you get hit on by female rock stars as well? Just two. Courtney was flirting with me, but I'd rather not say who the other one was. I'm sure Courtney wouldn't mind. I don't think she's a lesbian. I think she's more of a threesome kind of girl.

Let me guess ... Sheryl Crow?

She's definitely not lesbo. She didn't flirt with me at all. She's the most fucking coolest female star! She's smoking hot and so real. I really love her.

Mariah Carey?

She's really sexy. She's really well polished and very well taken care of. She's very private and doesn't like people talking about her. She has her people she share any of her personal life with you?

She's outspoken about everything. She asked me if I wanted to fuck anybody in Hollywood, who would it be? I told her, and she held up her little finger and said, "Don't even fucking bother. I've been there!" Then she held up her hands really far apart, dropped the name of another young A-list actor, and said. "Now, that motherfucker is packing a mean pistol!"

Who has the best body of all the rock stars you've massaged?

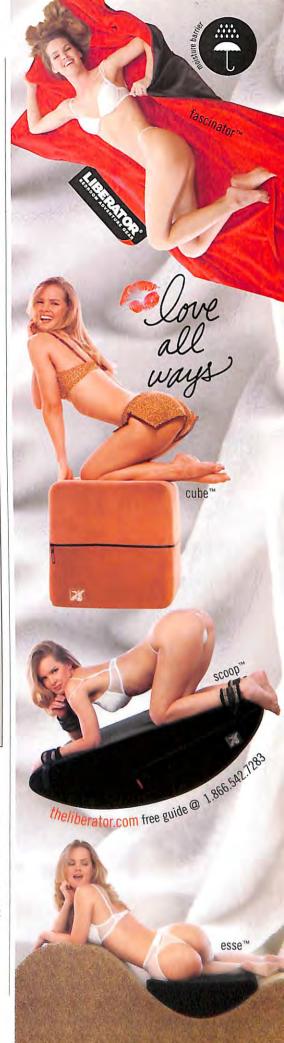

We have to break it down into male and female. Of the males, I would say it's a tie between Sting and Roger Daltrey. The best female was Lauryn sign confidentiality agreements before you even get to meet her.

How surprised are you that these very private people let you get so close to them and share so much private information about themselves?

It's unbelievable how much people talk about their private lives when you're massaging them. Think how much people talk at the hairdresser. Imagine how much they talk when they're naked and relaxed with their legs spread open. But I think these people enjoy being talked about. You don't climb your way up the way these people do unless you enjoy being talked about. I don't care what they say.

Is it true you dated Joey Ramone?

"I got the name Dr. Dot from Frank Zappa. If you look up doctor in the dictionary, it says 'to repair something broken or flawed.' That's what I do. I fix people. I help them."

He was my first boyfriend, yeah. People don't like talking about that because I was only 15 at the time. But Joey thought I was 19. This is how stuff with R. Kelly happens. Girls lie about their age. I said I was 19 even though I was really 15, and I dated him on and off for a few years. Now suddenly people say, "Don't talk about it because it puts Joey in a bad light now that he's dead. Let him rest in peace!" I'm sorry, but I can't erase the past. I was very close to Joey right up until his death. I got e-mails from him just months before he died. He reviewed my chapter on the Ramones and said it was great. He just asked me to take it easy on Johnny [Ramone]. I can't believe he said that, because Johnny was such a fucking prick. Everybody hated him. Even the crew. Yet Joey still went to bat for him. Even at the end. So I did what he asked and toned it down a bit. I was ruthless to Johnny.

What did you write about Johnny that was so bad?

He just bossed everyone around and he was a prick about it. He stole Joey's girlfriend, and he made her get a tit job and only paid for half of it. To this day, everyone jokes that only one tit belongs to him! I'm sorry if that upsets people, but if someone is an asshole, they're an asshole. You can't change history and lie about it.

How old was Joey?

He was 29.

Isn't that a felony?

Hey, since when has an age difference stopped a guy from taking some 15-year-old trim? Never! But it was never really sexual between Joey and me. I think he knew in the back of his head I was too young. We never went all the way. We did evervthing else, but never had intercourse. Every kind of sex but intercourse.

What did you like most about Joey Ramone?

His sense of humor. He was the funniest person I ever knew. He was also the best kisser of all. He had the best and juiciest lips ever! He was so romantic. He would hold me and just pet my hair for hours. He was so fucking sweet and romantic. He wasn't a big talker, but when he did talk, he was sarcastic and really funny! When he died, I was so upset.

Tell me about Gene Simmons.

I gave him his first massage ever! He's such a control freak that he'd never had a massage before. I massaged Kiss for years. But he never got one. The first thing he ever said to me was, "Are those lips real?" I thought, Who the fuck is this?

Gene claims to have slept with thousands of women. I'm guessing he hit on you. But the question is, did he score?

He definitely hit on me! It was the funniest thing in the world. His manager said, "Gene wants a massage." So I said, "Okay, but if I give him a massage and he tries anything, I'm going to charge you $250 and I'm leaving!" He said, "No, no. He really wants a real massage." So I went up to his room and as soon as I walked in the door, he turned the lights off and pinned me up against the door and started to lick me, I was so mad! He ended up just sitting on his bed and talking to me. He told me how women should be glad men cheat on their wives, because otherwise we would all be walking around like Mongoloids because our gene pools would be all messed up. He's actually a very funny person. He's the most honest rock star I ever met. He doesn't lie. He finally let me massage him, and he ended up loving it.

So you didn't get to experience his famous tongue?

It's really not as big as you might think. What was it like spending two weeks on the road with Eminem?

He is so fucking cool! The first time I heard his name, I thought he was a candy. We bonded right away. I told him he looked just like my brother, and he treated me like his sister after that. He was always asking me if I was hungry or if I wanted something to drink. Anyone who writes something bad about him just can't get an interview with him. I love him!

What's the best way for a groupie to get backstage?

Sign up as a runner. You run your ass off all night, but it beats having to blow some hairy, fat guy you don't know.

What's the kinkiest thing a rock star ever asked you to do?

I won't mention names, but a rock star once asked me to massage his dick while wearing leather gloves. Weird.

Besides your talented digits, you also moonlight as a sex and relationship advice columnist.

I love sex! If you say you don't, you're a fucking liar! I use all my experience to help others. I've had a lot of sex and I've seen a lot of sex.

Does it make a guy gay if he wants a girl to fuck him with a strap-on?

No. Men love having stuff put in their ass. The more powerful the man, the more he wants stuff stuck up his ass. It doesn't make him gay at all. Sometimes the guy needs to be fucked.

Biggest mistake women can make while giving oral sex?

Teeth!

Best way for a man to get laid? Humor! Fuck money. Just make us laugh.

Finally, in the words of Neil

Burn out, baby! Just keep going and going until you burn out!OI

The Ultimate Orgasm:

Revealing the Secret to SIZZLING SEX

Learning "The Ropes"...

The letters keep pouring in, written by women of all ages, about a supplement that has made their love lives explosive (literally!). I'd like to share one, from a loyal reader...

Jenny writes:

Last month, my husband returned from a business trip in Europe and he was hotter than ever before. The sexual energy around him was super-charged. and being together reminded me of the glorious days when we first started making love almost 10 years ago! It was incredible. He simply, completely, wore me out. And the best part of it all—it was as if he was having multiple o reasms. I know what you're thinking: men don't have multiples. That's what I thought too, but trust me, from what I witnessed, it was happening. I was so swept up in the excitement and turned on by his newfound vigor that when we finally stopped from sheer exhaustion. we realized at that very moment we just had the best sex of our lives! And. Nancy, for the rest of the week this amazing man continued to deliver.

We'd tried tantric stuff in the past and the results were so-so. But this was something so completely (believe me) out of the ordinary. After a few days, curiosity got the best of me, so I asked him what had transformed him into such a "power lover." He smiled as if he knew a secret and told me he'd I e a med "the ropes."

Turns out my husband had spent an evening in Europe with a Swedish nutritionist and his wife of 20 years. The couple was openly sexual and couldn't keep their hands off each other, so my husband asked them their secret. The nutritionist explained he regularly took a natural supplement, and gave my husband about a month's supply, telling him it would teach him "the ropes" of great sex.

The supply is about to run out, and we want to know where we can buy this incredible supplement. Do you know if this product is legally available in the States?

Jenny K. Detroit, MI

Jenny, as I've mentioned in previous columns, I do know all about what your husband used to enhance his orgasms. I'm happy to report that across the U.S. and Canada more and more men are finding out and using this unique (and completely legal!) supplement, learning that not only do they themselves benefit sexually, so too do their partners.

The physical contractions and fluid release during male orgasm can be multiplied and more sensitized using an all-natural product called Serogen. Although formulated to trigger stronger, longer orgasmic experiences in men by strengthening the prostate gland and vas deferens muscle, an added bonus of using Serogen—from a woman's perspective—is that these powerful, added contractions men achieve while in the throes of an orgasm can induce an intense, simultaneous female climax.

Moreover, the term "ropes" Jenny mentions in her letter is actually common European slang for the added contractions and heightened release that cause "rope-like" sensations during male orgasm.

Sergen is a one-of-a-kind supplement and is finally available in the States, distributed by only one importer—Somalab. The company has a product-line for men that includes a newly added Serogen-SP, a premium blend of the original. If interested in purchasing Sergen or SP, Somalab can be contacted toll-free at 1-877-ROPES-90. Orders can also be placed through Somalab's informational Web site: www.StrongerOrgasms.info.

You've lived through college. Now you have to survive real life.

In the fall of 1997. I arrived at the University of Pennsylvania and quickly gained the Freshman 15—the ability to drink 15 beers in one sitting. Every weekend it was drink all night, sleep all day. And then ... Sunday night rolled around. My body clock was so messed up from the weekend's festivities that I could never fall asleep at a normal hour. I would toss and turn all night.

After a few weeks of this, in order to combat yet another bout of insomnia, I sent an email with my thoughts and observations about college to 20 buddies from high school. In the subject line I typed, "Ruminations on College Life." (No idea where I got that Ruminations on College Life hit bookstores in the summer of 2002. Around the same time, I began a career as a stand-up comic. Many of the people who had been reading my column and book actually wanted to see what I was like in person. I was more than happy to oblige.

This year Simon & Schuster wanted me to write another book, and so Ruminations on Twentysomething Life was published in May. As the sequel to Ruminations on College Life, my new book details the postcollege experience. It's less kegs and more people using terms like FYI.

Believe it or not, I still send out funny e-mails to a mailing list of about 45,000 subthing that's ever happened to me in my entire life up until right ... now. That is, of course, until I was offered the most prized position in all of Western literature: advice columnist for Penthouse.

I call this column "Recovering Frat Boy" because I think the term embodies the ideals I hold dear. I've graduated college and acknowledge there's no going back. Yet I still believe that hard partying and loose women should be a part of any twenty-something male's well-balanced diet. Just because I'm not in college anymore doesn't mean I can't be there in spirit. And oftentimes, I'm not only there in spirit, I'm also there in person.

"She casually remarked that my bedroom looked familiar.... I thought she looked familiar. Then we both realized it: We had actually gone home together a year earlier. That's right, I'm hooking up in reruns."

from, but it sounded cool, so I ran with it.)

One of the things I wrote about was the obstacle course that is getting a beer at a keg party. There are a thousand people jammed around the keg, so you have to scream, "I live here!" in order to part the seas and make your way to the tap. You quickly pour yourself a beer before the people that actually do live there kick your ass. Then you sit down, put your beer on the table, and look away. When you look back a split second later, you notice there are 50 identical cups of beer on the table and you have no idea which one is yours. You start to pick up each one because you think you remember how heavy yours is, but they all feel the same. Then you're back to the keg yelling, "Hey, I live here!"

My buddies, themselves freshmen developing their own drinking problems, got a kick out of my e-mail. So one Sunday night a month, I'd email out another "issue" of "Ruminations on College Life." My friends started forwarding my e-mails to their friends. and their friends starting forwarding them to their friends. By the time I graduated, I had amassed more than 11,000 subscribers around the world. The sleepless thoughts of a drunken college freshman had become an international phenomenon, and the giant publishing house Simon & Schuster wanted to publish them as a book.

scribers, all stemming from my 20 high school buddies. (Check it out at AaronKaro.com.) Holy shit, indeed.

So what does a twentysomething have to ruminate about? What about the time I went out, got drunker than a guest on Jimmy Kimmel Live, and met a cute brunette who I invited back to my apartment? As things were getting hot and heavy, she casually remarked that she thought my bedroom looked familiar. A few minutes later, I said I thought that she looked familiar. Then we both realized it: We had actually gone home together a year earlier. That's right, I'm hooking up in

And so that's about every-

As I visit colleges across the country on my stand-up tour. I'll be reporting back in this column on what those feisty coeds are up to. If they're calling keg stands by some newfangled name, you can bet I'll find out about it (and then sample a few, just for journalistic accuracy).

This column will also feature your questions. If you've got one about chicks, booze, money, parents, booze, taxes, roommates, baseball, bars. sex, or booze, e-mail it to karo@penthouse.com. I'll give you a few pointers and then ramble off on a tangent of my choosing. In fact, let's not even call this an advice column; it's more like an antiadvice column: After all, I'm just a recovering frat boy.01

America's craziest, most grueling auto race pits 90 teams against the racetrack, the clock, and themselves.

3M Trim-Line

It hasn't been running quite as long as the Indy 500, which started in 1911, but the race known as the Cannonball One Lap of America has probably provided more driving fun for more people over the past 22 years than the big race on Memorial Day weekend.

One Lap of America is the creation of racer, journalist, author, and columnist Brock Yates. It evolved from the earlier and far more dangerous Cannonball Baker Sea-to-Shining Sea Memorial Trophy Dash that Yates ran for years, an all-out highway speed sprint from Manhattan to Redondo Beach.

OLOA combines a road tour of a big chunk of the U.S.A. with timed speed trials at some of America's best road-racing venues, with the highway route, total distance, and racetracks changing every year. The transits between racing venues, this year adding up to about 4,000 miles over a period of eight days and nights, are not timed or scored, so the only points the drivers get are for on-track performance. Tracks include ovals, road courses, dirt tracks, and drag strips, so you have to be both good and versatile to do well.

Small and light or big and power-ful—it doesn't matter what kind of car you bring to One Lap. As long as you bring your best driving skills, you can win this race.

DRIVINGFORCE

Where else but One Lap of America can you see a Lotus Elise, a Dodge Ram pickup. and a Chrysler 300 sedan at the same motorracing event? Eric Heuschele (below) driving the Chrysler 300 like he stole it; Heuschele works full time as a Chrysler engineer. and used One Lap to test the car's suspension. He won the Luxury class.

Although the event is meant for amateur car builders and racers, various factories have entered OLOA over the years, including Porsche, Mercedes-Benz, BMW, Ford, Chevrolet, and Saturn.

Yes, Saturn. The company uses it as an exercise to test both future products and the mettle of its young engineers. This year there were two factory teams participating from Ford: one racing a Lincoln LS: the other a Ford Police Interceptor, lights and all, and a Chrysler 300 SRT-8.

A popular bumper sticker for OLOA reads THERE IS ONLY ONE RULE: THERE ARE NO RULES, but that's not even close to the truth. It means to convey a wide-open spirit of run-whatcha-brung as far as the cars go, but there are still lots of rules to follow. The car must be licensed, street legal, pass a rigid safety inspection, and carry a fire extinguisher—just in case. You must ioin the Sportscar Vintage Racing Association, which sanctions the event.

You have to pass a physical exam and have a doctor submit documents to SVRA. You have to wear an up-to-date DOT/Snell-approved helmet and a driving suit at every event. You have to display all the event sponsor decals on your car. You can tow or trailer your racer to the event to save wear and tear. but the tow rig can't follow the racecar around or act as a service vehicle. And you have to send the organizers a check for $2,100 to enter, which tends to keep out the less-than-serious racers. Some 94 teams of racers came from 27 states and Canada and Switzerland this year.

If you've never run OLOA before, you are called a "lap puppy." After that, you're a "lap dog" forevermore. Entries are divided into classes from Showroom Stock GT 1 Big Bore for the fastest, most expensive stock and modified cars, such as Corvettes, Vipers, and Cobras, down through SSGT2 Small-Bore for cars like Mazda RX-7s and 8s with rotary engines, then Mid-Priced Sedans, Vintage for older machines, SUV for pickup trucks and sport utilities, Retro for cars like the Mini and PT Cruiser, Economy for four-cylinder cars, and Alternate Fuel for hybrids and diesels.

At each of the racing venues, each driver gets one reconnaissance lap to get a feel for the track, then two timed laps and a cool-down lap, usually two sessions per day per track, and sometimes three. Your $2,100 buys more track time than you could otherwise afford at tracks like Indianapolis Raceway Park, Summit Point, Beaver Run, Roebling Road, and Virginia International Raceway, and it's real racing, not practice.

Since Tire Rack, in South Bend, Indiana, took over title sponsorship last year, the event starts and finishes at Tire Rack headquarters, with a timed wet skid-pad event on opening day and a dry skid-pad event on the last day as the closer. What happens in between is the real meat of OLOA, where drivers have to cut fast lap after fast lap, track after track, day after day, in order to win class honors.

Take a corner too hot, go off track, and lose precious seconds off your time. Drive too timidly, and you'll get the same result. And just because you and your codriver had to drive as much as 1,300 miles overnight without sleep, food, or a shower to get to the track on time, that doesn't mean you get a break. There are no breaks. If you have a mechanical malfunction that prevents your car from running, you get no points for the day, so you, your codriver, and your car all have to be very robust for eight days and nights.

It's not all fun and games. Over the years, it's become a tradition at OLOA to run your car with a charity's name on it, and collect pledge money before or after the event. Running for a charity also helps when you try to explain to a trooper why you were going so fast.

Over the course of 22 OLOA events, there have been a great many stories, incidents, accidents (nothing more than minor injuries), and heroes. Our favorite story is about the two kids from Cincinnati who scraped together the entry fee but had no car. They went to Budget and rented a Neon for $117 a week with unlimited mileage. They put more than 5,000 miles on it before turning it in, with the decals still on it. Smart!

Our favorite heroes include Mike Hickman of Connecticut, who has run his modified 1981 Chevy Camaro in OLOA 15 times in a row, and finally won this year. Then there's Fay Teal of Philadelphia, who holds the record for OLOA participation at 19 years in a row. That's especially significant because Fay can't even drive; she has MS and has been confined to a wheelchair the entire time. That, ladies and gentlemen, is the true spirit of One Lap of America.O—

12-year-old Acura NSX. a quick, fast car that's no longer competitive in SCCA racing. But it's fun to drive, and it works fine at One Lapenough for 22nd overall.

Rocky Mountain High

Beat the Colorado winter in the Denver area's hottest club.

Everything is bigger and better in Denver, from the sprawling Great Plains to the looming Rockies. Plus, you can become a member of the Mile High Club without ever leaving the ground. Could there be a more appropriate location for a sexy, steamy Penthouse Club? We doubt it.

From the minute you turn onto the cobblestone drive, you'll feel right at home. A full-size boutique carries Penthouse gear and unforgettable souvenirs. A gorgeous hostess is waiting at the check-in desk. Inside, you'll find an atmosphere that's impressively spacious but surprisingly intimate. Grab a drink from the marble-top bar, then turn your attention to the center of the room, where dazzling dancers perform on two massive stages with built-in light shows. And if you think you've seen pole dancing before, think again. The Denver club boasts a two-story dance pole—one of the country's tallest.

Champagne booths line an entire wall so you can enjoy the company of your favorite entertainer. Or follow the "stairway to heaven" to our nude room, where you can watch a stage show or get the ultimate private dance.

If you're not in the mood to share, head to the VIP area, where members can enjoy a dance in a private nude room on the club's penthouse level. The sexy staff is on hand to serve you wine, champagne, cognac, and cigars.

You may never want to leaveand you won't have to. If duty calls, there's a soundproof office where you can catch up on calls, send faxes, or hook up your laptop. Then again, we doubt you'll spend much time working!

Grab a drink from the bar, or order a sizzling steak-the club's specialty. After all, with girls this hot everywhere you look, you may want to stay for lunch and dinner.

TRADING PUNCH LINES WITH COMEDY'S BEST

ou've just published a book called My Horizontal Life: A Collection of One-Night Stands. You're not a sex addict, are you?

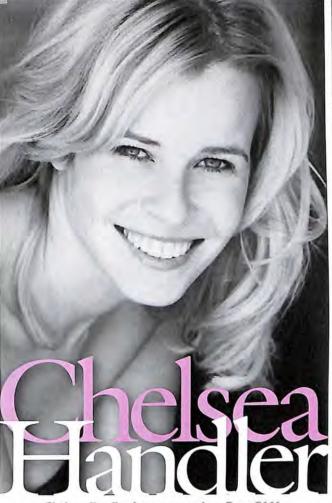

I have a friend who joined Sex Addicts Anonymous, and when she told me, I broke out laughing. She's like, "Stop laughing. It's very serious. I'm addicted to having sex with strangers." I said, "That's not an addiction. That's being a whore!"

Then why all the one-night stands for you?

It's important to know if you have sexual chemistry together. Why wait two or three months after you start dating someone to find out that they are bad in bed or, even worse, they're into anal beads and duct tape? When did you lose your virginity?

I think I was 18. It's hard to say, since I started lying about my age right around the time I started to get boobs. I remember hooking up with this guy who had one of the finest bodies that our ecosystem has ever created. The next morning I was walking around with a considerable limp, and I wasn't sure if it was because of all the dancing from the night before or the sex. The sex was great, but as time went on, his personality just made the sex intolerable. Our relationship finally came to an end when he thought it would be fun for me to come and watch him surf. I'm like, fun for who? I would rather sit at home and staple my hand to a wall. It was at that point that I realized why they call it a one-night stand: because it should only be for one night.

What's one thing you don't want to see on a guy you're having sex with?

Being with a guy who is shaved from head to toe is one of the biggest turnoffs. I'm with this hot-looking guy and I rip off his T-shirt to find he has zero chest hair. He tells me he shaves, and I'm like, "On purpose?" I had this look on my face ... worse than death. But I was a pro at getting myself out of anything. The guy says, "Are you okay?" I tell him it's my first night of drinking and I guess I can't hold my liquor. He says, "You'll feel better in the morning," and I'm like, you won't be around to find out.

Does size really matter?
Yes—when you're with some guy whose penis is the size of an AK-47. Something that size is not entering me. No way, no how! I was with this guy, and he's dry-humping me. I'm like, "Is that your penis?" He started to laugh, and I'm like, "Seriously, is that your penis?" He said yes, and I told him, "We can go to my room and maybe fall asleep together." But I did not want that thing coming out of its shell for fear that it might attack.

Is there such a thing as too small?

A small penis on a little boy is not a big deal. However, if that boy continues to grow and his penis does not, it turns into a very big deal. Here I am with this hot guy, and the thought never crossed my mind that he might have a little dinky. Little is a generous word when you're describing something the size of a canned Vienna sausage. The thing was smaller than my big toe. So I see this thing, and I start screaming, "My car! My car! I forgot to leave my girlfriend my car." I bolted home and told my girlfriend what had happened, and she said, "You didn't have to leave. The guy could have been good at other things." Yeah, like what? Math?

What do you think about sex in public?

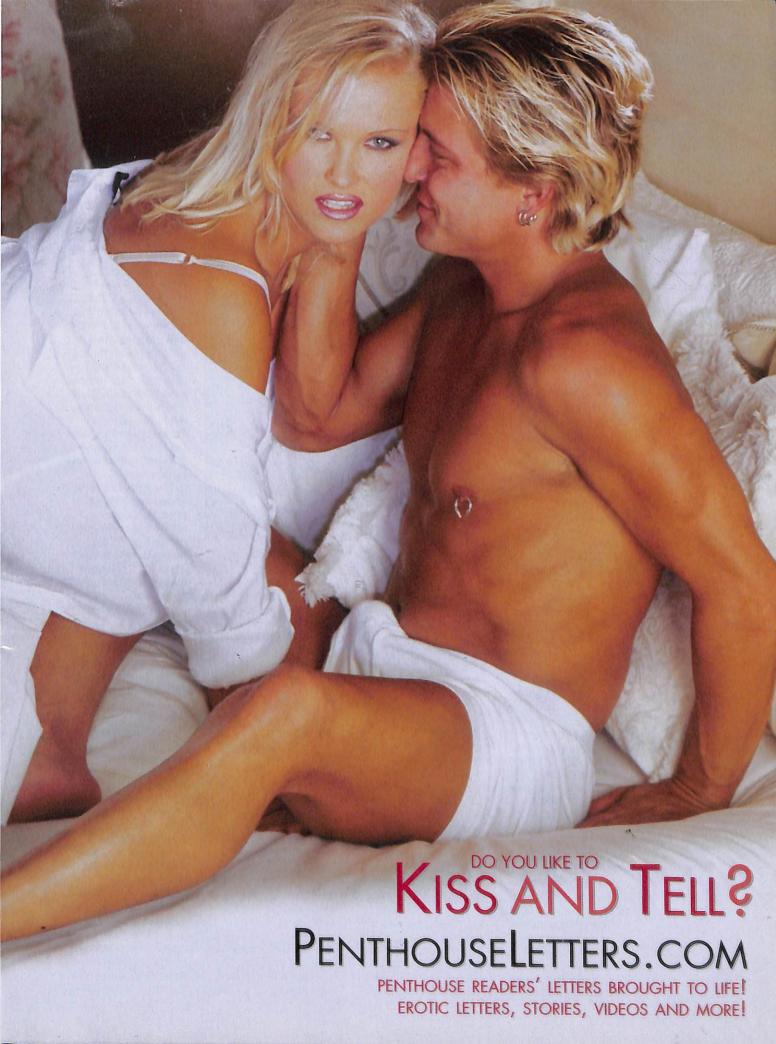

Public groping is just so offensive—unless it's being done to me. Then it's perfectly okay.

Any rules about going home with a guy you met in a bar?

Just make sure you have your own wheels. I do not under any circumstances carpool. I remember meeting this guy who insisted on driving me home the next morning, and I had to resort to some tough love. I told him, "Listen, unless I have my car, I'm not coming over. And I think we both know that will make you and Mr. Happy very, very sad."

So how many guys have you had sex with?

Let's put it this way: You know you've slept around a lot when you go into a bank and see someone you've had sex with on a life-size poster for small-business loans.O

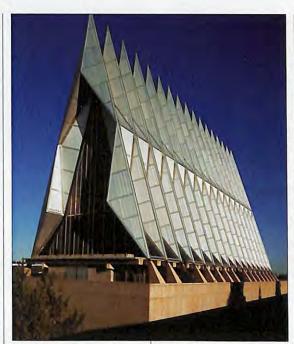

The chapel at the U.S. Air Force Academy: Are evangelical Christians exerting "undue influence" at the school?

HOLY WARS

You might assume that in a military afflicted with endless problems, the Chaplain Corps would be an island of tranquility. Not so.

Consider events at the U.S. Air Force Academy, Several weeks ago, Captain MeLinda Morton, one of two top chaplains there, publicly charged that she was removed from her post after complaining that evangelical Christians were exerting "undue influence" at the school. Further, she charged that academy officials were aggressively promoting conservative Christianity by allowing extensive proselytizing on campus by evangelicals. An Air Force official denied the charges, saying that Morton's removal was planned to allow for the transition to a new chief chaplain.

This tiff might have remained an in-house dispute, but members of Congress began to receive complaints that the controversy involving Morton was only the tip of the iceberg. A Yale theology professor alleged that she heard one Christian chaplain at the academy tell cadets they would "burn in the fires of hell" unless they became "born again." And an Air Force officer (and academy graduate) complained that his son, a cadet, was called a "Christ killer" by other cadets who had been converted to evangelical Christianity.

Those kinds of complaints led 46 members of Congress to send a letter to Air Force Secretary Michael Dominguez demanding that he investigate allegations of religious intolerance at the academy and correct the situation. Given that strong congressional urging, Dominguez flew out to the academy and demanded briefings from academy officials on why there was a "religious problem." The officials hastened to assure Dominguez that the assorted allegations were untrue, although they conceded there was "apparent tension" between evangelical chaplains and those of other faiths. Dominguez wasn't totally convinced, and has ordered a top-tobottom review of why the academy's chaplains don't get along.

Meanwhile, the Navy is experiencing its own chaplain problem. But the problem in this case involves evangelicals alleging discrimination against them by the Navy and its Chaplain Corps. At the moment there are at least three lawsuits, including two class-action suits on behalf of more than 700 current and former chaplains that allege bias against evangelicals or any "theologically conservative" chaplains. The suits charge that those chaplains are routinely denied promotions.

For the record, the Navy says it doesn't discriminate against chaplains for their religious beliefs or affiliations, but privately notes that it has been experiencing more disciplinary problems among its chaplains than the rest of its officers, mostly involving sexual misconduct or harassment.

STICKER SHOCK If there is one sacred vessel in the U.S. Navy, it's the fabled aircraft carrier-the behemoth that projects American military power throughout the world. But however majestic, carriers have a finite life span and have to be replaced every few decades. That's precisely where the Navy is beginning to experience a serious problem.

The Navy has long insisted that it needs at least 15 carriers to maintain its commitments around the globe. But the escalating costs to produce ships with hideously expensive state-of-the-art technology has reduced that force from 15 to 12. Now, to replace even one aging ship will require a lot of moneyan eve-popping $10 billion. And that's just the beginning: The next generation of escort ships for the carriers, the DD(X), will cost more than $1.5 billion each. Moreover, it will cost an estimated $300 million a year to operate a single carrier task force with these new ships.

Unless the Navy somehow can grab a bigger slice of the defense budget, which is unlikely, it will have to do the unthinkable: reduce the number of carriers. Consequently, Navy officials privately admit they will almost certainly reduce the force to ten.O+ THE

What does a man do standing up, a woman sitting down, and a dog on three legs? Shake hands.

 Two female second-year medical students are watching a man walking in front of them. He's walking slowly and in a very funny way. The first girl says, "He definitely has arthritis."

The second one says, "No way. He obviously has a heart condition. He can't breathe well, and that's why he's having trouble keeping his balance."

After arguing a while, they catch up and ask him.

He says, "Girls, we were all wrong. You, young lady, were wrong about the arthritis. And you, sweetheart, were wrong about my heart. And I was wrong, too-I thought I had to fart, and I shit in my pants instead."

Mind-blowing Ball Play

Balls, nuts, testicles, scrotum, gonads, and the family jewels: all terms used to describe that sacred sack wherein originates the seed that created us all.

You certainly don't associate your balls with the same peak pleasure you get from whaling on your whang; it's subtler and, hopefully, more tender. But just because the feelings are subtle doesn't mean they should be ignored. Your balls deserve some loving and tender attention too. So let's take a close look at your nads and the ways they can bring you more pleasure than pain.

Your balls are nestled in that scraggly sack of skin called the scrotum. As you become aroused, they tend to become bigger and form a firm knot. When you're just about to come, your scrotum and testicles will rise slightly and hug the shaft of your penis, like bungee jumpers on the upswing. And your balls can easily go from soft to hard; it depends entirely on the temperature and your level of excitement.

The perineum, that strip of anatomical real estate between your balls and rectum, has the potential for sweet sensations. (Women have one too.) Have your lover place her fingertips there with just enough pressure so that the skin moves over the tissue beneath it.

Want to explore more mind-blowing ball play? Here are several techniques for her to try (gently, of course).

SIMPLE TESTICLE MASSAGE Have her explore the space between your testicles with her fingertips. You might with the penis hand while the testicle hand pulls gently in the opposite direction. Have her find a tempo that works for both of you.

BALL RUB

With the thumb and forefinger of one hand, she makes a ring around the base of the scrotum. Then have her gently squeeze until your testicles are popping out a little, but not enough to cause pain. She runs her fingertips up and down the sides of your scrotum with a light tickling touch. Simple but highly effective.

INTERCOURSE EXTRA

OUT OF THE BALLPARK

This works best when accompanied by a blowjob. But she can do it anytime to give you the ultimate in fore-play pleasure. While stroking your penis, she takes your balls in her mouth and gently moves them around. Men say that this gentle "ball munching" simply can't be beat for exquisite sensation. The unusual intimacy of this tactic makes it the most exquisite pleasure possible for most men.

The key is to "try a little tenderness"—a light touch, suck, or tickle is all that's necessary. Irwin Goldstein, M.D., professor of urology at Boston University Medical Center, speculates that even prefer this to a handjob. Once she finds a stroke that pleases you, have her repeat it often without varying the pressure or finger position, since the margin between delight and boredom is small.

Persuade her to get well acquainted with them, and you'll both win—you from the soothing and exciting sensations, her from the pleasures of pleasing you.

PENIS UP, BALLS DOWN

With well-lubed hands, she grasps the shaft of the penis with one hand, then clamps the thumb and fore-finger of her other hand around the base of your scrotum where it attaches to the groin. This should cause your testicles to pop out a bit and the skin covering them to become taut. She should squeeze both hands lightly, then do an upward stroke Different rear-entry positions may also allow her to reach between your legs and caress your balls. Experiment and see what feels best.

THE BALL BRUSH-OFF

She can use a clean makeup brush for this tactic. On your back, spread your legs and have her lightly brush your inner thighs, testicles, lower stomach, and penis. Repeated circles around the outside of your balls can feel particularly breathtaking. The sensation is somewhere between a fingertip and a feather. You'll feel titillated and extremely relaxed at the same time. And she'll think of you every time she uses her makeup brush.

"nearly everyone associates a male's testicles with pain rather than pleasure, and that's possibly the reason they've always been avoided during sex play."

You might inform your lady that the majority of women rarely touch a man's balls; this should be more persuasive than begging (women do love to be different). When she realizes that your balls are warm and cuddly, and sees how much pleasure you derive from her fondling them, she might even come up with some variations of her own. And you won't have to pay her $20 million or more, like some ballplayers get.OI -

Fact #1: Erection Quality Can Decline With Age.

Fact #2: You DON'T Have to Accept It!

Feel the Flow [Again!]

Ask the Expert

Readers: As you know, I'm always excited to share success stories I hear from readers or news about great new products that come my way. For years, I have been saying Sexual Fitness for men is all about maintaining healthy blood flow and proper urinary flow. This letter from Janet demonstrates just how "Feeling the Flow" has improved her husband's sexual fitness.

Dear Valerie,

I know this subject is often difficult for men and women to talk about, but I have such good news that I thought I'd share it with your readers. After all, it was your advice that motivated me to help my husband take action with respect to his "dilemma".

For the past couple of years, my husband has been experiencing what we thought was an "age related" drop in his sexual performance. It just seemed like his sexual energy and stamina had really started to fade. Worst of all, when aroused, he wasn't as firm or full as I'd remembered. I wish I could tell you that it didn't affect his confidence, but it really did. In fact, I was worried that he just wasn't attracted to me anymore. After 15 years of marriage, it killed me to see him that way. I knew I had to do something to help him!

Then, a couple of months ago I stumbled on your article "Sexual Fitness for Men as They Age". Your article described some natural ways for improving libido, blood flow, and performance as men get older. You mentioned a product, Vazomyne – Sexual Fitness Therapy for Men, which intrigued me. I showed it to my husband and he did a little research. Although he wanted his "edge" back, he didn't feel ready for a prescription so he asked his doctor a couple of questions about sexual fitness.

His doctor told him that what he was experiencing was normal but that in taking a proactive approach to his sexual fitness, he didn't have to accept it! He told my husband about the natural effect of ingredients such as the L-Arginine in Vazomyne, that can help to increase blood flow by expanding vessels and capillaries. Plus, the Saw Palmetto and Zinc found in Vazomyne have been shown to be excellent for conditioning the prostate to maintain healthy urinary flow. It's pretty widely known that poor prostate health can lead to a drop in sexual performance. Our research showed that Vazomyne's formula was specifically designed to work with a man's body chemistry and really boosts sexual performance for the long run.

Well, I'm happy to say that my husband tried it! He's been taking Vazomyne for about 2 and a half months and honestly...he's back! He feels like a new man and he's performing like when we were newlyweds! I've definitely noticed the improvement in firmness and fullness when he's aroused and he even has more stamina. But most of all, there's nothing better than seeing my husband get his sexual confidence back. Now he takes Vazomyne once a day and he's always ready to "go with the flow," whenever I am!

Natalia and Martina (right) got in touch with nature at a hemp-happy shoot and interview for High Times magazine; the girls talked about politics, their first time (smoking, that is), and their favorite munchies. Valentina (bottom) checks out the wares at sexy adult store Romantic Depot.

The photo shoot for High Times magazine's special August sexand-pot issue was definitely a "ioint" effort as Pet of the Year '05 Martina Warren and Pet of the Year Runner-up '05 Natalia Cruze teamed up to pay homage to herbal delights. The sexy duo wore pink pot-leaf bikinis and shared spoonfuls of hemp ice cream. "It's wonderful to have sparked this joint venture between High Times and Penthouse," says High Times' Bobby Black (above).

In the issue, Natalia talks about legally toking in her hometown of Vancouver and her desire to study botany. "Dude, if I'm dreaming, don't you dare fuckin' wake me up," writes Black. We have to thank Black and fellow High Times staffer David Bienenstock for putting together such a smokin' story. Check out more of Martina and Natalia at HighTimes.com.

DANGEROUS CURVES

Voluptuous #5 (Toxxxic)

Big beefy stud Lee Stone sure seems to be enjoying himself with Kelly Erikson in director Michael Adam's tribute to a variety of beautifully rounded women. The blonde, busty Erikson takes her pounding like a champ, as do Kami Andrews (with Rio Mariah) and Pandora Dreams (with Brittany Skye). Brunette fans can rejoice, as they'll find a couple of stunning dark-haired lovelies. Stacked Victoria Givens gives Stone a deep and sloppy blowjob in a scene that goes from his trademark standing sixty-nine to a big nasty facial, with plenty of hard banging in between. Our new favorite sex machine, Cherokee, is a curvy cutie with a ripe, full ass and a voice like Minnie Mouse. She spreads the love in an outing that finds her sultry self stuffed with cock. When she bounces that ass up and down, your eves won't leave the screen until you scout out some Kleenex. This disc won't win any awards, but that's a mild tradeoff for a show as good as this.

20 Pages & Hot Chicks (Tennervision) i.i.i.

The cheese factor runs high from the very beginning of Jerome Tanner's look into the life of a sexy porn writer. The title refers to all you need for today's porn film. X-rated prizewinner Lauren Phoenix plays a smut scribe who breaks the fourth wall with much talk of writing fuck flicks for a living. In the sex scenes, which are scored with plenty of clichéd music, the sparks fly. Harmony gets things started with some great head, while Holly Wellin provides some seriously hot moments in a bar. Phoenix doesn't fly into action until the final scene, but she's worth the wait. After a bit of dildo dipping and finger stuffing, she serves up an absolute screamer that shows why she's making a name for herself. Lauren can make the strongest of us lose ourselves, as you witness her licking balls, talking trash, and taking one for the team (on her face).

Jackin' Jill

Guess Who's Cumming Elegant Angel Video

If watching women come is your favorite spectator sport, this is for you. The inimitable Roscoe Bowltree, the onscreen persona of veteran porn director Patrick Collins, travels to the Czech Republic to find girls who will stuff their pussies full of sex toys for his—and your-enjoyment. Given ten chances to do just that, any man would have his hands full, and (no pun intended, really) Bowltree is no exception. The results are fairly predictable, which leaves you the choice of who you want to see coming. The cast is mostly for those who prefer blondes—lush Kirsty is a good bet to please, as is honey-haired Kelly—while fans of brunettes will flock to Anita and Aneta for their dark charms. Most of the girls do simple masturbation scenes, but a few, like Tereza, wind up sucking Roscoe's rod. The sound track of moans and groans adds a nice counterpoint to the buzzing of vibrators and the moist lapping of cunt in a show that takes you on a familiar journey that's off the beaten path.O+

GIRLS' NIGHT IN

I had been trying for months to convince Kathy to socialize more since her divorce, so I was surprised and delighted when she stopped by my office to ask if I wanted to go out for drinks on Friday.

We planned on pulling an all-nighter, and Kathy was going to spend the night at my place. It was fun to be out with her again. Moving from bar to bar, we eventually ended up at the strip club, where we watched the sexy shows of both duys and girls.

Kathy bought me a lap dance as an early birthday present. It was my first lap dance from a girl, and the pretty redhead I chose gave me an incredibly hot dance that left me very aroused.

When Kathy and I got back to my place, we put on nightgowns and sat on my bed, talking about my exciting lap dance. I told her how much I'd wanted to touch the redhead's beautiful breasts. Kathy gave me a naughty smile. She pulled her nightgown over her head and told me to show her how I would have touched the redhead's tits. I was a little surprised, but cupped and gently squeezed one of her small round breasts. Kathy let out a squeal when I pinched her dark-brown nipple, and said that the redhead would have liked this. Then she asked if there was any place else I'd wanted to touch.

I didn't need further encouragement. I laid Kathy back on the bed, pulled down her panties, and gently kneaded her swollen clit between my fingers. "Ooh, she would have really loved this,"

Kathy moaned.

I had no idea how far she wanted this to go, but as horny as I was feeling, I was willing to go as far as possible. I slid a finger inside Kathy's moist slit and up into her juicy cunt until she begged for more fingers. I pulled off her panties and, kneeling between her legs, pressed three fingers inside her love hole. Then I lowered my mouth to her tits and sucked on her hard nipples while fingering her. I loved how her nipples felt in my mouth and the effect my tongue was having on her. Kathy's moans filled the bedroom. She writhed beneath me as I finger-fucked her. When Kathy cried out that I was going to make her come, I got totally caught up in the excitement of the moment.

"Come for me, Kathy!" I said as I plunged my fingers harder and faster into her cunt. "I want to feel you come on my fingers!"

She began trembling and crying out. I felt her pussy muscles grip my fingers. Then her warm cunt juice soaked my

POWER SEX

Learning all about the Swedish "ropes"

Reprinted with permission of MHS

We have been hearing more and more about a sex phenomena men are experiencing, something called "the ropes". We were intrigued enough to contact New Generation Labs, the makers of Ropex® to find out more about the ropes.

MHS: We're always on the lookout for new information that will help take sex to next level but the terminology is throwing us for a loop. Can you explain what "the ropes" is?

NGL: Sure! The term is an analogy to help visualize the streams of ejaculate experienced during orgasm.

MHS: So how would an average guy go about having more ropes?

NGL: There are basically two factors that determine the amount and size of the ropes: The quantity of seminal fluid expelled and the strength of the contractions driving the ejaculate. This can be achieved with proper supplementation and adequate foreplay.

MHS: How does your product help achieve more ropes?

NGL: To answer your question, let's take a step back to the origin of the Ropex® formula. In the mid 1950's, a flower seed extract process was developed in Sweden. The extract, which we call PollixolTM, was extensively researched for its sexual benefits, specifically its ability to enhance the functioning of the prostate. European doctors and health practitioners, who frequently prescribe natural supplements, started recommending the extract to their male patients where it has now been used by millions during the past five decades. To the users' surprise, they were experiencing the additional benefits of stronger more intense ejaculations and longer associated orgasms. We came across this product a few years ago and decided to bring it to the US market.

MHS: Did I hear you say longer orgasms?

NGL: Well yes, the increased seminal fluid produced requires more ejaculatory contractions, which in turn, prolong orgasms.

MHS: What type of results can Ropex® users expect?

NGL: Ropex® enjoys an 85% success rate. Some men notice results in as little as 5 days. In Europe, the formula is taken as one would a daily multi vitamin to maintain good sexual heath and it is also the way we recommend taking Ropex®.

MHS: Where can our readers find Ropex[®].

NGL: Ropex® can be ordered from our website at www.RopexUSA.com or by calling our Customer Service toll-free number (888) 799-6979. We have a special discounted offer as well as a discount maintenance program and provide a 30-day money back auarantee.

hand. But she wasn't finished yet and begged me to keep fucking her. I kept up the finger action until she squirted all over my hand again and I felt her muscles relay

After a few minutes, Kathy told me to sit on her face so she could lick my pussy. I quickly straddled her face and lowered my horny cunt to her mouth. "Oh, yes! Suck me, Kathy! Suck me off!" I screamed as she sucked my clit and lapped up the juices flowing from my quivering cunt until I shook with release and poured even more love juice into her waiting mouth.

Then I lay on top of Kathy, pressed my lips to hers, and caught a taste of myself. I made my way down between her legs and began savoring the taste of another woman for the first time. Hearing her cry out to me how wonderful it felt made me enjoy my task even more.

"You're making me come!" Kathy screamed. Holding my head tight to her cunt, she delivered the most delicious repast I'd ever tasted. I continued licking and sucking until she came again, many times Kathy made me climax-I was too busy making her come and drinking more of her sweet nectar.

Kathy and I made love late into the night. While it was an incredibly hot experience, we thought that it was too risky to get together this way again. We made a promise to just savor our wonderful experience.

Well, that didn't last long. Kathy is on her way over now, and I can't wait to make love to her again. I just might have to let my boyfriend in on our erotic little secret.—T.N., Minnesota

DOUBLE HER PLEASURE

Each year my wife and I pick a theme for our birthday gifts. One year sex was the chosen theme, and Zoe wanted a threesome as her present. This led to us calling our friend Mark, who's an architect, and inviting him to spend that Saturday night with us at a newly restored hotel. Mark agreed.

On Saturday, we drove to the hotel and at 5 P.M. Mark arrived. Zoe took a rewarding me with another hot, delicious treat.

I got my dildo from the dresser drawer and buried the rubber cock into her cunt from behind. I fucked Kathy with it while tongue-fucking her tight anus until she came. Then I licked her yummy love juices from the dildo.

After Kathy fucked me with the dildo, we fell into a delicious sixty-nine that lasted for 20 minutes. I lost count of how guick shower and dressed in her garter belt and bra in front of us. At Mark's request, she left her panties off.

Mark and Zoe began kissing and undressing, and before I knew it, he had her lap-dancing on his hard cock. I took some great photos as they fucked.

Zoe loves frontal action and kissing. so she took another drink and turned around to straddle Mark. His cock was deep inside her as he kissed her breasts, and she was really enjoying herself. I took a couple more photos and then got undressed myself. This scene continued until we decided Zoe should move to the bed so we could both enjoy the fun and double her pleasure.

First we got her off with some two-guy action, with Mark giving her some lengthy oral attention, me kissing her breasts, and her sucking my cock. She came at least three times.

Once Zoe had recovered, she began alternately sucking our cocks again. When Mark was ready, he pulled her up on her hands and knees and fucked her from behind while she continued to suck on my prick. With him fucking her juicy cunt and diddling her clit, and me tweaking her sensitive nipples, Zoe experienced multiple orgasms. When she begged Mark to fuck her in the ass. I almost lost it.

Zoe reached into her bag on the floor and handed Mark a tube of lube. He worked first one, then two fingers, into her tight asshole until he felt she was ready. When I heard a low, guttural moan escape her lips, I knew that Mark was pushing his hard-on into her backdoor. With each thrust, he groaned and she moaned. Then his thrusts deepened and quickened, and when he exploded inside her, it was as if his orgasm went directly through her. He gripped her hips as she quaked with her own climax. Seconds later, Zoe collapsed on top of me and Mark collapsed on top of her.

Mark went to the bathroom to wash up. I stroked Zoe and myself while I let her rest. Although this night was for Zoe, I was still hoping to come myself. When she'd caught her breath, she started my blowjob again, but I stopped her when I felt I was getting close. I pulled her on top of my cock and let her ride me at her own pace until we came simultaneously, drenched in each other's sweat.

have a vertical Velcro closure on the backside, just beneath my ass. I realized what love adventure he intended, and thought it would be pretty cool.

It took me nearly a week to sew the outfit. The slit was eight inches long and barely noticeable when closed.

I placed the monofin inside, stripped naked, and slipped on my mermaid out-fit. It was supertight around my waist, hips, and legs, but it looked really sexy. It felt like I had a second skin.

When it was time for our vacation, we sailed our 30-foot boat to one of our favorite islands. There were no other boats around, so I removed my bikini bottom and my top, slipped the mermaid costume on, and reached for the handheld air bottle that we sometimes use on our dives.

I kicked leisurely under the boat with my arms at my sides and one hand holding the air bottle. I felt unbelievably sexy, and my nipples were hard. I couldn't help but touch them. I heard a splash and turned to see Trent wearing While behind him, I dove under his legs, twisted around, and came up with my face toward the surface. Then I took his cock into my mouth again and continued to kick with my mermaid fin. We were only connected by his thick, luscious cock. I kicked just enough so that we were moving through the water.

Trent leaned back. I moved with him, still keeping his manhood in my mouth. Trent could easily see this bare-breasted mermaid giving him the underwater blowjob of his life. I knew I could make him come this way, but I also knew he wanted to try taking me from behind.

Doggie-style is my favorite position because I can play with myself while Trent is thrusting hard and deep into my pussy. I have the most intense orgasms this way, and that's what I wanted now.

I turned my backside to him and invited him to take me from the rear. I felt the tab being pulled back and then his thick cock thrusting between my legs. The slit was perfectly placed for Trent to thrust into my pussy. But I had a surprise for "Zoe came at least three times. Once she recovered, she began sucking us.... When she begged Mark to fuck her in the ass, I almost lost it.... Although this was for Zoe, I was still hoping to come myself."

Mark returned and got some good shots of Zoe and me with the digital camera. Then he gave me the camera and knelt on the bed so Zoe could give him head. When he blew his load, she swallowed as much as she could, and I was right there the whole time with the camera getting some close-up shots of her deep-throating him.

Somehow, we misplaced those memorable photos during our last move, but I still get a hard-on when I remember what it was like seeing Zoe get fucked by our friend.—T.J., Kentucky

SEX DOWN UNDER

My husband and I have kept our marriage strong by having what we call "love adventures." We have a vacation home in the tropics, and we both love to scuba-dive. This summer, our love adventure took place underwater.

As a surprise, Trent bought me a "monofin," which has room for both feet right next to each other, and asked me to practice learning how to swim underwater in our pool doing the dolphin kick.

I started swimming naked underwater, wearing only the monofin, and I knew Trent really liked watching me. I loved it too, especially when the water rushed past my shaved mound.

Trent asked me to buy some blue/green spandex material and design a mermaid outfit—one that would allow me to wear the monofin inside it. He also wanted the costume to his scuba tank, fins, and mask, but no swimsuit. His cock was already hard.

I took my first breath from the air bottle and swam toward Trent just as he reached the sea floor. I kicked toward him and, in one smooth motion, took his delicious cock as far down my throat as I could. I wanted his cock in my mouth, and I wanted it as deep as I could take it—which is pretty deep. I plunged back and forth with long strokes of my lips and tongue.

Then I released him, swam off a few feet, and took another breath from my bottle. Trent swam after me, but I easily stayed ahead. I circled and swooped around him while he stayed motionless.

him. While facedown, I bent over double and made it clear that I wanted him to take me in the ass. I trusted Trent to be gentle and not hurry.

I relaxed in the warm caress of the sea as Trent eased his cock slowly but steadily into my asshole. When it almost reached its limit, I pushed back hard and we both moaned, releasing huge bubbles of air.

We thrusted back and forth. I found that I could finger my pussy while Trent was buried in my rear. While we floated horizontally, Trent bent over me with one hand on my shoulder and played with my breasts, keeping his cock buried to the hilt in my ass.

He was ass-fucking a mermaid who couldn't get enough. It was sheer delight, and our coupling got even more frenzied. With each thrust, my mermaid tail moved us farther from the boat.

I didn't want it to end, but I started to climax, my head facing the surface. I was rubbing my pussy, arching my back, and flipping my mermaid tail upward so that I was almost in a V. This caused my ass to tighten even more on Trent's cock as he straddled my body.

When my climax hit, I couldn't help but scream as bubbles poured out. I couldn't see Trent, but I heard his deep grunting and felt his warm seed being pumped deep into my ass.

I wanted him to stay inside my body, but he gently pulled out. We shared the air from his scuba tank as we surfaced. After we kissed, I asked him if he liked fucking his mermaid. In response, he asked me when we could do it again.—

GETTING WOOD

This whole thing started because we needed firewood. Our friend Justin, who has a cabin in the nearby mountains, had told Kim and me to let him know when we were running low because he had more wood than he could use. He'd also told us that he was planning on going up there on Saturday, so we decided to drive up to visit him and pick up a truckload of wood.

His cabin was nestled in a ravine on the side of a mountain overlooking a beautiful lake. He had lots of extra wood, so he and I cut and split most of the afternoon while Kim made dinner.

Kim and I have always been open about our fantasies and love to turn stood up, Justin announced he was going upstairs to take a shower. Kim said she'd put the rest of the food away.

It took me 20 minutes or so to get the wood covered and secured. The temperature was dropping, so I hurried back inside. I came in through the kitchen and didn't see Kim. Then I heard muffled voices coming from upstairs, and the shower running. The voices were coming from Justin's bedroom. My heart started racing, as one of my fantasies involved another guy with my wife in the shower. My jeans suddenly became too tight with the anticipation of what I hoped to discover.

Through the clear plastic shower curtain, I could see water cascading over their naked bodies. They were locked in each other on with sexy stories. Most of them involve one of us fucking someone else while the other watches. Justin didn't know it—at least I didn't think he did—but he was the star of several of my wife's hot stories. I knew she was pretty horny from the things she'd talked about on the drive to his cabin, but I had no clue that she was about to act out one of our stories.

After a good dinner and a few drinks, we retired to the living room to relax in front of the fireplace. Justin suggested we stay the night. I looked at Kim. With a sly smile, she said it was a great idea.

Since we were going to stay, I needed to go out, cover the load of wood, and tie the tarp down over it because it looked like it was going to snow. When I a passionate kiss while he kneaded her firm breasts and she rubbed his butt.

I was mesmerized and could hardly believe what I was witnessing.

I suspected that Kim knew I'd figured out where they were and what was happening, because she turned toward the door. Justin had moved his head to her neck and was kissing and licking his way down her breasts. She leaned her head back to expose more of her throat to the caresses of his tongue as it slid down. His left hand moved all the way down her slick body to rest between her legs and lightly massage her pussy lips.

As his tongue found and licked an erect nipple, two fingers parted her pussy lips and gently slipped inside. I could hear her gasp with pleasure. She arched her back and spread her legs a little more, giving him better access as he started slowly pumping his fingers in and out, being sure to brush against her engaged clit in the process.

Kim started to sway in ecstasy, moaning with pleasure as Justin alternately sucked, licked, and nibbled the tips of her sensitive nipples. She suddenly cried out, pulled his head closer to her breast, and started grinding her crotch into his hand, caught in the spasm of an intense orgasm. Justin lightened up a little as she calmed down. She pulled his head to hers and kissed him deeply.

Kim lowered one hand and took hold of Justin's cock. Then she knelt down so his swollen member was level with her mouth. She took most of it between her lips and started a slow pumping action while she gently massaged his balls and ass with soap. Kim was taking her time, slowly sliding his rock-hard shaft in and out of her mouth. She slyly looked through the curtain at me and started licking his cock like a lollipop, making sure I could see her tongue on every inch of his shaft.

I was trying to deal with my own bulge. I knew that she loved to watch me masturbate, so I pulled out my cock and ran my hand up and down it. While looking at me, she slid two fingers into her pussy and began finger-fucking herself, still maintaining a steady rhythm on Justin. Watching Kim finger herself very nearly caused me to lose control and shoot come all over the place, so I lightened up a little. She could see how excited I was getting, and I could hear that husky moan of hers that means she's going to come any second. She started bucking on her fingers, thrusting harder and harder, and was losing her concentration on Justin's cock.

Justin knew it too, and began thrusting a little harder himself. He was just about ready to explode in her mouth. They were both writhing in the shower—Justin pressed against the wall and Kim on her knees with his engorged cock in her mouth and her expert fingers working her pussy.

SOMETHING KINKY

My girlfriend and I have been dating for five months. We are enrolled at the same university, and weekend pleasures are always at the top of our list of things to do.

One weekend about a month ago, I decided to spice things up. We had never been exhibitionists, but I could not get this wild idea out of my head. In my dorm, there's a lounge with a TV, couches, and a pool table. I told her that we were going to do something kinky, and asked her to wear a skirt and meet me in my room at ten.

She arrived, looking as hot as ever, and I proceeded to eat her out until her cunt juices covered my face. Then I told her to follow me to the lounge. I turned on the lights, placed her lovely ass on the pool table, and slipped my hard-on into her pussy. She moaned and cried out with every thrust. Some people who walked by didn't seem to notice, but a few stopped and watched for a while, which turned us on even

We went into the courthouse and he ushered me toward a back staircase. We said nothing as we climbed two flights to the top floor, but we both knew sex was the only thing on the menu. A narrow strip of sunlight entered through a small window near the ceiling. I steadied myself against the wall as Craig pulled up my skirt. He was pleased to discover my lace-topped, thigh-high stockings and flimsy thong.

I reached down, unzipped his fly, and guided him to my eager body. His throbbing cock brushed against the lace and I heard a low rumble in his throat. He buried his face in my neck and his hands drifted down the front of my shirt, unbuttoning it along the way. My bra opened effortlessly in his skilled hands. Something told me he hadn't learned that at the police academy.

He pulled my legs tight around his waist, and the thrusting began. With both of us jamming away as if our lives depended on it, it wasn't long before his cock filled me with warm come. Our breathing was still heavy as the task more. We came simultaneously to the cheers of our spectators.

We haven't repeated our performance in the lounge, but it inspired me to think of other public places to have sex. Although our subsequent escapades have been exciting, none has ever topped that first public display. It was one of the best ideas I've ever had.—N.D., Colorado

UNIFORM JUSTICE

I recently took a day off to pay a speeding ticket. As I went up the steps of the small-town courthouse, I recognized one of the officers who was leaving the building. He stopped just outside and lit a cigarette. He looked up and our eyes met. He smiled as I walked over.

We embraced briefly. He asked what the hell I was doing there, and I pleaded my case to him. He filled me in on his life. As I halfway listened, I studied his body. The uniform did not do him justice. It occurred to me that while we'd been good friends in college, we hadn't actually been alone since we'd once shared a shower following a drunken fraternity party. I recalled the incident easily because it was the first time I had ever showered with someone of the opposite sex.

I was yanked back to the present when Craig asked me if I'd like to have lunch. I accepted although I wasn't really hungry. Craig said, "Follow me." came to an end.

He pulled away and leaned against the wall. It seemed like hours before we were able to pull ourselves together. I straightened my skirt and buttoned my shirt. It was then that I felt Craig behind me, kissing my neck. A smile spread across my face, but this time I didn't give in to horny urges. I just walked away, down the stairs, and out the door. There was still the matter of my speeding ticket, and I always try to obey the rules. Well, most of them.

As I paid the cashier, I felt a warm trickle of come glide down to the top of my stocking, and realized I was missing my bra.—E.V., OklahomaO+ a Suddenly Justin pulled my wife's head away from his throbbing cock, turned her around, bent her over, and rammed his cock into her hot pussy. She had an orgasm immediately, and let the world know about it. As he was banging the hell out of her, his balls were slapping her so hard that I could hear them over the sound of the water. Justin couldn't control himself any longer. He cried out and filled her snatch with his hot load. He was barely able to hold her up when her knees started to buckle-she was coming one last time. If I had been touching myself at all, I would have lost it right there.

Justin pulled the shower curtain back and stepped out, feigning surprise that I'd been there all along. I looked past him to see Kim beckoning me with her lust-filled eyes. Justin just looked at me and said, "Next!"—I.S., Tennessee

(Excalibur, Teaching Mrs. Tingle)

CALIGULA MAY VERY WELL BE THE MOST CONTROVERSIAL FILM IN HISTORY. ONLY ONE MOVIE DARES TO SHOW THE PERVERSION BEHIND IMPERIAL ROME, AND THAT MOVIE IS CALIGULA, THE EPIC STORY OF ROME'S MAD EMPEROR. ALL THE DETAILS OF HIS CRUEL, BIZARRE REIGN ARE REVEALED RIGHT HERE: HIS UNHOLY SEXUAL PASSION FOR HIS SISTER, HIS MARRIAGE TO ROME'S MOST INFAMOUS PROSTITUTE, HIS FIENDISHLY INVENTIVE MEANS OF DISPOSING OF THOSE WHO WOULD OPPOSE HIM, AND MORE.

THE COMBINED TALENTS OF CINEMATIC GIANTS MALCOLM MCDOWELL, PETER O'TOOLE, JOHN GIELGUD AND SHAKESPEAREAN ACTRESS HELEN MIRREN, ALONG WITH AN ACCLAIMED INTERNATIONAL CAST AND A BEVY OF BEAUTIFUL PENTHOUSE PETS, MAKE THIS UNIQUE HISTORICAL DRAMA A MASTERWORK OF THE SCREEN.

Not for the squeamish, not for the prudish, CALIGULA will shock and arouse you as it reveals the deviance and decadence beneath the surface of the grandeur that once was Rome.
